CENTRAL SYMPHONY

Diversity in Harmony

Central is a diversity—a diversity which is a product of its people and their ideas. Like the movements of a symphony, the inter-related aspects of Central's students, teachers, activities, and tradition blend to form a unit, the Central Community.

Each one of the fifteen hundred students who come to this campus to continue their preparatory education is an important part of the whole. He must want his own voice to be heard and his opinions aired. He must be unwilling to conform to the ideas of the mass but, rather, must keep his individual identity.

In the daily activities at Central each student is aware of his small sphere, one of many spheres that fit together and fall into place like bits and pieces of knowledge which finally form a pattern and become harmony.

Varied Activities Serve as the Core of Central's Greatness.

A full range of activities is open to the Central student. He finds offered to him the widest range of classes from fourth-year French to advanced mechanical drawing. Whether it be tennis or football, the student finds his sport among the great variety offered under the supervision of an able staff of coaches. The major problem is deciding which of the various classes and sports are most appropriate for him. If he chooses wisely from these and utilizes his interests and talents to their utmost, he can more easily determine which paths his future education or career may take.

It is the student's duty to give his best to Central. Membership in an honor or service organization provides him with an opportunity to develop his talents as he performs a valuable service to the school. There are many individual services which he may render from running off the daily bulletin to working in the bookstore.

Exploration of capabilities through participation in school activities will round his personality and teach him to work with others. He must be willing to cooperate with his fellow students so that Central may work as a body, yet he must not conform to the degree that he loses his individual usefulness.

Colors of Our Campus Blend Into a Resplendent Pattern.

The Central campus is a kaleidoscope of people. Yearly hundreds of students come here to gain experience, knowledge, and awareness—awareness of the world about them, of people, and of themselves. The ideas and ideals ingrained in them here are of the utmost importance, for high school years are the impressionable years.

Central is a vast unit working together, harmonizing—a unit made up of individuals with singular personalities and complex natures. Each of the approximately fifteen-hundred students of our school is decidedly different. Some are boisterous and outgoing; others are shy and introverted. Some enjoy participating in sports, others try their talents in writing, and still others find that their interest lies in school politics. Each has his peculiarities. Each Centralite is unique. Yet the diverse personalities here blend into a harmony which is known as Central.

Majestic Trees and Shaded Lawns Lend

Daily we pass by this tree yet not notice its sturdy, well-ordered appearance—its stability. The buildings of Central High possess these qualities and they too go unnoticed.

Designed to function with efficiency, Central does lack ornamentation and outward beauty. Its beauty lies within its halls, which have received their grace from the thousands of students passing through them. Every student who gives his love and service to Central leaves his imprint—an example to be followed.

With its shaded lawns and impressive trees the campus complements and completes the school to which we point with pride

Grace and Dignity to the Central Buildings.

FACULTY-CLASSES

The purpose for careful biology dissections may completely escape the new student, but laboratory work is only one of the tools which enable him to explore the mysteries of life and the world about him.

Acquisition of knowledge is no instantaneous process. As the new student first mounts the steps to enter Central's halls, armed with nine years of basic instruction, he finds awaiting him the broadest choice of subjects, the best faculty, and the highest reputation offered by any high school in the city.

Over forty courses are available to him. From among these the student may choose the ones which best suit his needs. He can exercise his abilities under the experienced eyes of a proficient staff of teachers. However, study cannot be accomplished wholly by standard classroom work. The major burden falls on the individual—he must participate actively in the discussion of ideas; he must decide what is important for him to remember.

With the faculty's instruction and guidance, he can obtain a firm foundation for the future and join the ranks of the many Central graduates who have become respected leaders in their community and nation.

A Friendly, Efficient

UNDERSTANDING AND WISDOM—qualities necessary to one in a position of authority. Mr. King can call on these as well as his extensive experience to deal with the challenges of school supervision.

In any school the faculty determines the quality of education a student can receive. Because of her superior instructors, Central has long been noted for academic excellence. Our teachers constantly try to improve teaching methods through experimental classes.

Although they work continually, checking papers and doing other routine tasks, Central's teachers do not allow themselves to become bogged down in their work. Many of them engage in extracurricular activities such as sponsoring clubs and supervising the bookstore.

For recreation many of them enjoy bridge, the theatre, music, and the opera. Hobbies range from golf and tennis to hat-making and gardening. From this wide range of interests our entire school profits. The teachers gain enjoyment, while the students reap the benefits of a liberal educational atmosphere stimulated by the diverse interests of the faculty members.

Administrative Staff Keeps Central Running in Harmony.

SITTING SERENELY Mrs. Thomas relaxes momentarily from the stress and bustle that prevail in the myriad duties of assistant principal. Unhindered by constant calls on her attention, she manages daily to finish her work efficiently and with understanding.

WHAT A PERFECT way to start the day. Only ten absent agree Central's secretaries, Mrs. Norton and Mrs. Sanders. Although hard pressed by duties, they are willing and able to help when students enter with problems.

THIS BIBLE illustrated by former Central student Walter Parke is one of the library's most treasured volumes. Lending it proves weekly is the quietest of Miss Crump's many duties.

CONTINUAL CLATTER AND chatter of students at lunch cannot, by some strange mystical feat—dispel the air of relaxation in which our teachers can discuss everything from bent IBM cards and city-county consolidation to the Berlin situation.

Literature and Grammar Are the Building

SANDRA HENLEY goes not because she beat Ned Connor for the sports page, but because she found clippings for her vocabulary notebook. Students snip articles illustrating word meanings and usage from newspapers and magazines.

TO ANALYZE LITERARY style it is necessary to develop good style in your own writing, remarks Mrs. Claygett. Senior students

Susan Bize and Hy Bellis are attentively to her explanation of dangling participles.

Blocks of a Thorough Education.

SENIORS? STILL at the agonizing practice of diagramming simple, compound, and complex sentences! Lyn George and Finley

Brown do not mind; they realize that diagramming leads to better sentence structure and more effective grammar usage

"NO, SAH, I ha'n't seen none," quotes Eve Coulter as she reads to an interested audience excerpts from Huckleberry Finn. Miss Potts' junior English class studies the style of such famous American writers as Mark Twain and Robert Frost

English includes a variety of skills and interests. There are creative writing and the history of literature. Types of literature studied are the short story, the novel, the play, and lyric poetry.

Central's English department provides a complete presentation of British and American literary culture. Qualified teachers attempt to develop in the student the ability to express his thoughts clearly in both writing and speaking. The student is placed, according to his ability, in an advanced, basic, or standard class. These levels of study have been established at Central to insure each pupil a solid background in English.

Students Are Introduced to World Cultures

"RUSKI." By correctly shaping the lips to form sounds, Janice Green and Kathy Davis more easily master the difficult syllables of Russian words

People who are well-trained in foreign languages are better equipped to serve America's society and to understand the society of nations the world over. To understand the terminology used in legal and medical professions, a basic foundation in Latin is necessary. Through the study of French, Russian, and Spanish, the student becomes acquainted with the customs, culture, and literature of the countries; his awareness of today's world is stimulated.

Central's language teachers offer their students the opportunity to learn to read fluently, to speak correctly, and to understand another language, either modern or classical. The integration of foreign language study with laboratory work provides Central students with the unusual advantage of utilizing the latest techniques and newest equipment in mastering the language of their choice

IMPORTANT PHASES of any language course are the history and geography of the country studied. Mrs. Biles points out the characteristics of Gothic architecture to second-year French students: Rosemary Williams, Robert Finley, and Elaine Goldstein

Through the Study of Foreign Languages.

BY RECITING in Latin the Lord's Prayer led by Anita McMoray, Mrs. Lanier's Latin class practices proper pronunciation. In addition to the mechanics of grammar, correct enunciation is an important phase of language comprehension.

WILL THE MACHINE ultimately replace the teacher? This equipment, which has been recently installed in Central's new language laboratory, provides the pupil with an interesting variation in the methods of foreign language study.

Through the Study of Math the Student

WEARING A TIRED disquieted expression, a Thurston contemplates an expansion problem stretching endlessly across the horizon. The advanced math course poses many such complicated problems that refuse to equal anything but zero.

"PYTHAGOREAN THEOREM? Distributive Axiom? Addition Axiom? One of these formulas must solve this problem," ponders James Wilson. Being sequestered in an isolated corner does not help him to prove this theorem, but reasoning and original thinking will.

Develops Clear, Logical, Accurate Thinking.

Mathematics is the universal language of the sciences. Recognizing its importance and tremendous value to the student, Central through the years has developed an intense and thorough program of math courses.

We have pioneered in the introduction of vanced math is held on college levels. Also offered are second-year algebra, unified geometry, trigonometry, and advanced algebra. Capable instructors provide the training necessary to prepare students for work in college.

"WHAT D'YA MEAN it looks like a thermometer?" quips Charles Fineberg. Actually, this "thermometer" is a slide rule which Charles is adjusting to solve Linda Pope's lengthy algebra multiplication problem.

"NOW YOU ARE catching on," laughs Gloria Goddard to John Morrow as she explains the rotation of squares! This trig. class adds to their foundation of algebra which they received as freshmen.

Science Is the Tool by Which Students Explore Their World.

"HEY, SOMETHING'S still moving around in this one" exclaims David Kubitz to Paul Vahos. This bug collection is a project of Mrs.

Schue's biology class. It's the result of weeks of hunting for their specimens and hours of research.

OH, OH! There goes the lab! Heads whirl to find the source of the bright light glowing from the front of the chemistry lab. It's only Susan Lowery burning phosphorus to test for the presence of oxygen in the bottle!

Science is the key which has opened the gates to the "Space Age." More and more of Central's students are feeling a desire to become a part of this age and do so by pursuing science courses. Through these courses, the students gain knowledge of the physical world, current ideas concerning nature's laws, and an understanding of how the development of science has influenced the course of civilization.

Central provides courses in each of the fundamental sciences: biology, chemistry, and physics. Examining plant and animal specimens through microscopes provides biology students with a first-hand opportunity to recognize the development of life through various stages. The processes of the universe are made clear to chemistry students who perform conclusive experiments in Central's well-equipped laboratory. In physics, students work with weights and measures; they learn about matter and energy and their physical changes.

IN SPITE OF the light weight of the bicycle wheel, the force of the improvised gyroscope almost pulls back Bobby Brzhan. Under the supervision of Mr. Weeks, the physics instructor, Bobby demonstrates the principle of centrifugal force.

WORLD GEOGRAPHY STUDENTS Sandra Sacks and Ray Oppen inspect these interestingly unusual shells. Closely related to the class's study of the ocean, these shells illustrate the various types of animal life inhabiting the ocean.

YOUNG TIME MAGAZINE and the Commercial Appeal as weapons to prove their point, Charles Friedman and Jim Vance engage in an all-out cold war over a current world situation. Also entering the debate to press his point is Malcolm Hindin. Such discussions offer great intellectual stimulation to this American history class.

The study of history fulfills the need of modern man to orient himself in time. No real understanding of the conditions and problems of life today is possible without a knowledge of the forces and events which shaped them. History aids in self-understanding; it can lead to a comprehension of the forces of modern society continuing in varying forms from the past. History courses offer a student opportunities to develop in three ways that will be useful to him regardless of his future place in life—in learning to read critically, to write effectively, and to use research techniques and the analysis of data.

Central's American history, ancient history, and world geography courses equip students for duties as responsible citizens. They provide a practical knowledge of domestic and foreign affairs helpful in such fields as teaching, library work, journalism, law, and government.

Which the Present Is Made.

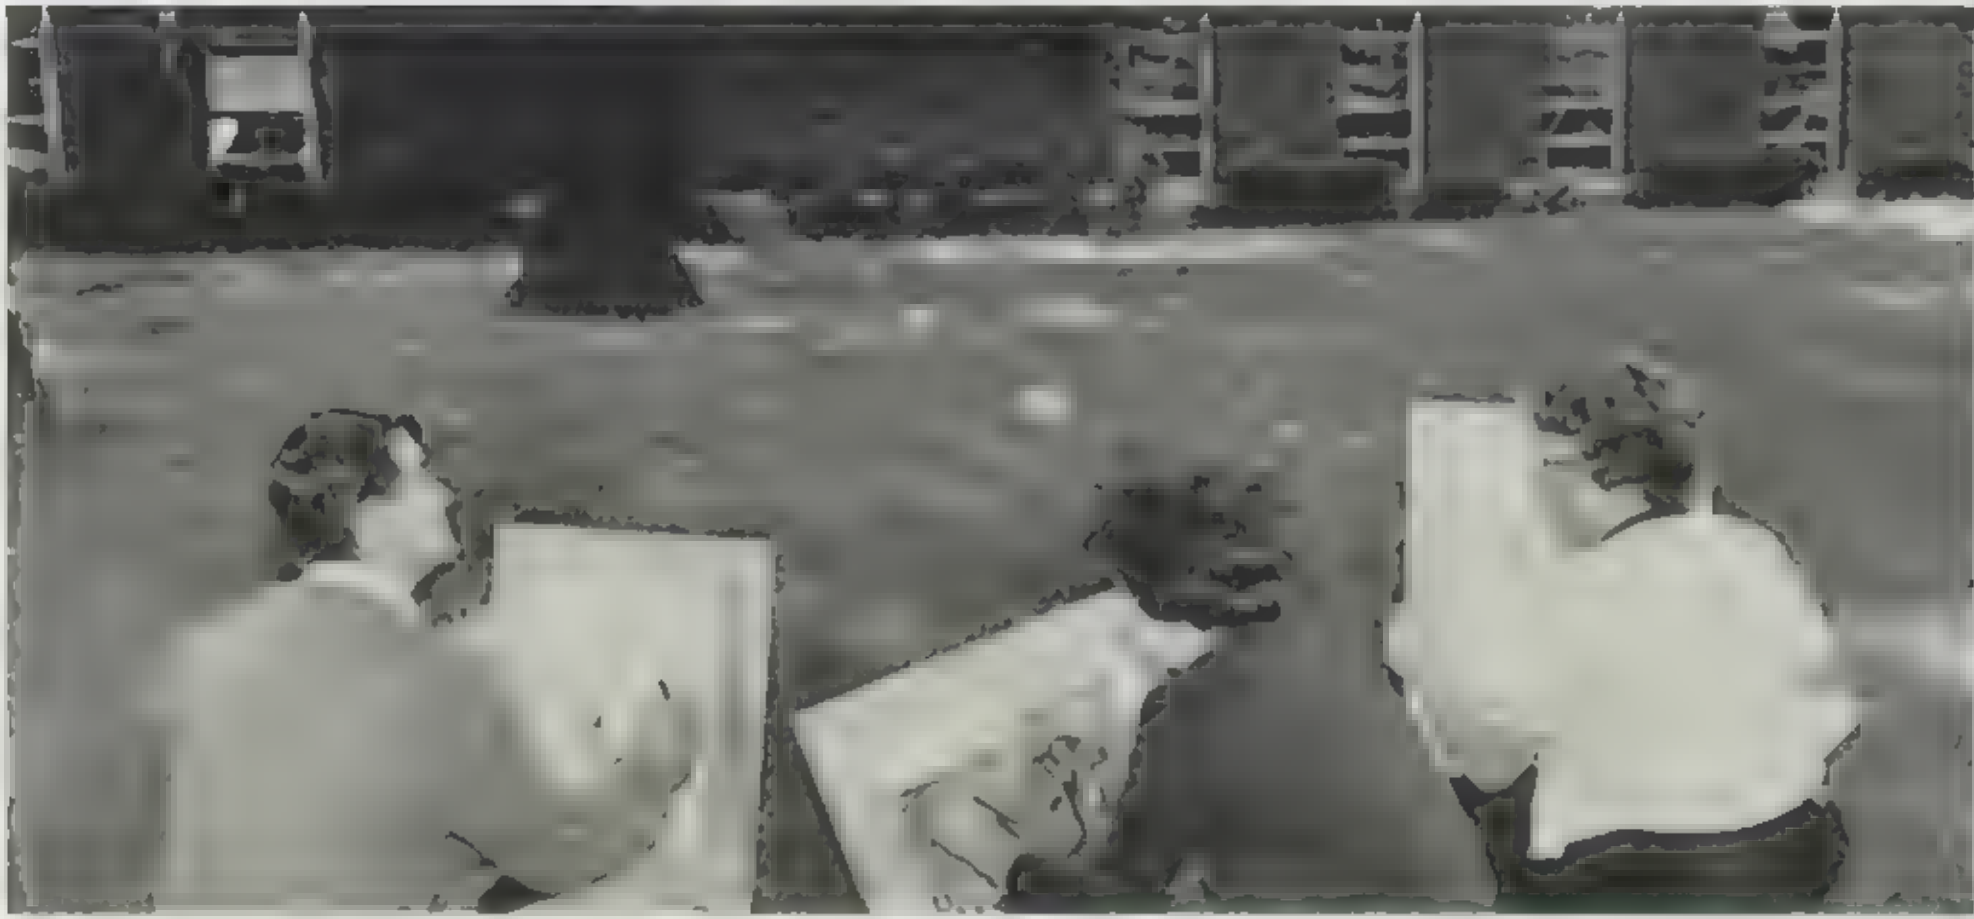

EAGER TO LEARN about our nation's past and future, American History students study laws governing our country. Here Mr. Agno and Mrs. Smith discuss the document which most affected the nation's history, "The Constitution of 1787."

EXPLAINING THE EXPANSION of the Russian empire under its mighty kings, Sandy Johnson illustrates her topic with a colorful map of the Persian kingdom. Such assignments give students a chance to learn through research facts that they would not ordinarily find in their textbooks.

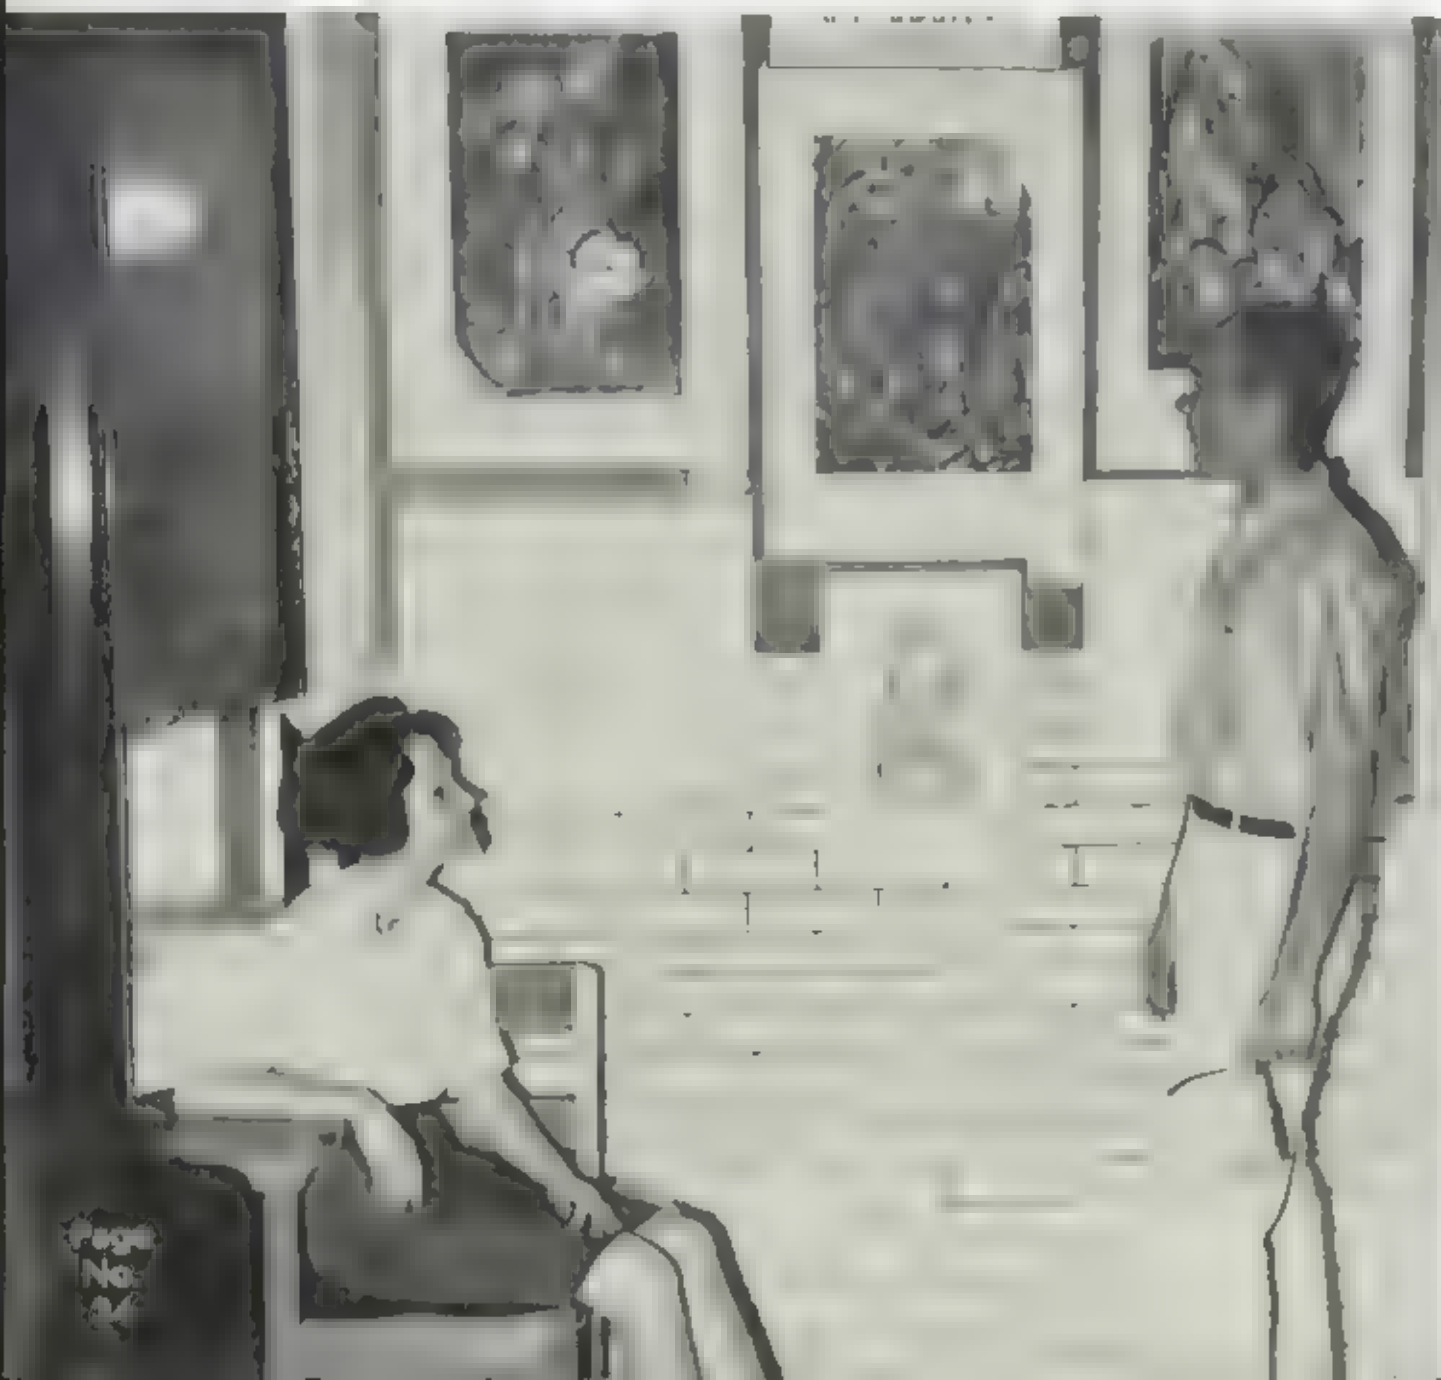

Through the Study of Speech and Art Creative

INTERRUPTING THE REGULAR class study Miss Hamilton art teacher encourages the students to create. Gail Cook and Pat Expression Is Effectively Developed.

Centralities are becoming increasingly aware of the fact that speech is one of the most practical subjects offered, as it is beneficial in all fields. Through courses in speech, students acquire correct diction, poise, and the ability to condense ideas into well-constructed sentences. Central's second-year speech course, which concentrates on the theatre, teaches the fundamentals of acting, stage craft, directing and evaluating productions.

Art is an unlimited type of human expression. By studying art, students are given the opportunity to test and develop their talents and to experience the satisfaction gained by creating. They also acquire discriminating taste and sound critical judgment of the arts. Central's art department offers basic training and practice in fundamental artistic techniques in addition to theories of design and the general history of art.

WAVING HIS CONFEDERATE flag enthusiastically, David Myers proclaims that Dixie is the place to be. Speech students learn that facial expressions and animations are very important factors in capturing and holding the attention of an audience.

QUIT LAUGHING Sharon. This scene is supposed to be dramatic." Jessica McNeil scolds Sharon Hicks as they rehearse a scene from a modern English version of Shakespeare's "Taming of the Shrew." David Doten and Mike Rauscher find that presenting plays to their speech class not only entertains but also helps them to understand more about acting and directing plays.

HARMONY IS THE goal of Central's band. With hours of practice, David Shind improves his ability to blend the tones of his saxophone into the rhythm of the musical arrangement.

Through study the students become aware of the equal importance of harmony and structure in music, as they gain interpretative and performing experience. To those who have general interest in music, Central offers the opportunity to take voice or to receive training in playing an instrument. Theory and music composition are also part of the music curriculum.

Central is proud of her music department. Under the guidance of Mrs. Wesberry, Central's mixed chorus has been rated superior for the past several years in the music festival at Martin, Tennessee. Led by Mr. Ragsdale, the band won first place in the West Tennessee Marching Contest. Student participation is constantly encouraged through student recitals, plays, and membership in Central's glee club and Central's band.

GUIDED BY MR. RAGSDALE Central's band instructor, Larry Neaves discovers that perfection is the result of determination, effort, and practice.

FOUR OF MISS Mallett's outstanding Home Ec. students—Carol Smith, Wanda Garrett, Darlene Green, and Helene Fares make a last minute inspection of the table setting. Brave, sampling the refreshments before serving them to parents and teachers, they assure themselves that the guests will not be bothered.

KEEPING BEDS WRINKLE FREE and making a patient tidy and comfortable are feats every girl should master. Miss Wallace, assisted by Esther Wote, Tina Surrency, and Ann Young, demonstrates to her home nursing class the art of making the bed while the patient is still in it.

Feminine, Fashionable, and Physically Fit.

ATTRACTIVE ENSEMBLES for any time of day and night are originally presented in Central's annual fashion show sponsored by Miss Grier's Home Economics department. Effectively modeling these cozy creations are Barbara White and Marie Jagendorf.

Physical education, required of tenth-grade girls at Central, results in healthy, therefore happier, girls. Such sports as volleyball and softball, which provide healthy recreation, develop co-ordination and build muscle tone. Grace and poise, important feminine characteristics, are acquired in modern dance. Home nursing provides students with information needed to care for the sick and aged at home. Central's physical education course is welcomed by the girls as a relaxing diversion in the daily routine.

Gaining experience in cooking, meal planning, decorating, and child care, girls learn to provide comfortable homes. Students create clothes suited to their budgets and personalities. The annual fashion show gives the student body an opportunity to become familiar with the department and affords girls the occasion to display the garments they have made. Each year Central's home economic students receive awards for their culinary and sewing skills.

SARAH SHAW AND Lisa Biles crouch ready to get the rebound, but Mary Robinson is one jump ahead of them as she appears to be scoring another goal. The six weeks of basketball is a very popular part of Central's physical education course.

Preparing for Future Vocations, Students

MAKING SHORTHAND SYMBOLS is not an easy task, that is Sandra C. discovers as she works with Mr. Anderson. Correctly written symbols are essential to a student who prepares to write another year of sequences.

MOANS OF BEWILDERMENT from Jerry Sarsing break the efficient click-clack of the typewriter. He partially covers his face, realizing a typewriter ribbon is not as easy as it looks.

SCIENTISTS WORKING ON a powerful new rocket? No, these are mechanical drawing students. Under the direction of Mr. Stanford Platt the class learns the basic methods of construction which will greatly aid them should they go into the fields of mechanical engineering or architecture.

Receive Training in Commercial Skills.

CALLING CQ, CQ Danny Tarver and Frank Hogan make an attempt to contact other radio hams on Central's ham radio station. In this way, students learn to apply their knowledge of amateur communications.

USING DELICATE implements, Richard Moyer carefully constructs a typical wall detail. Richard, who plans to become an architect, gains valuable training through the architectural drawing course.

Instructors and Student

Initiated in 1919, the Central R.O.T.C. battlegroup has maintained a record of lofty achievements and high goals. This has been achieved by the two-year R.O.T.C. program. While teaching the basics of military—first aid, care for equipment, drilling, and military courtesy and tactics, Sgts. Cox, Sims, and Edgar instill in the cadets the traits of good character—respect for flag and country, responsibility, and leadership. Led by the examples of cadet officers, the cadets bring honor to their school as a group and as individuals.

Existing within the R.O.T.C. are other organizations which offer cadets the opportunity to follow their varied interests and to bring recognition for Central. By the delicate performance of intricate movements, Central's precision Drill Team ranked third in Federal Inspection and second in the Veterans' Day Parade. Besides placing first in city-wide competition, the Central Rifle Team holds the distinction of having defeated the Ole Miss Air Force and Navy Freshman Rifle teams when they traveled to Oxford for an interstate rifle match.

THE RESPONSIBILITY of organizing and leading the battlegroup is vested in the Cadet Colonel. Louis Snyder has performed this duty admirably and has helped to bring about the proper functioning of his command.

ORGANIZATIONS

Leadership must be developed. The leader is chosen from the ranks of an organization. With club support, he is given opportunity to develop—through service to his school and to himself. The strength of Central's activities program lies in its superior leaders

Central's organizations are divided into three general groups. Service organizations, whose operations rely upon the opinions and interests of the student body, function as the backbone of creative student activities. There are honorary clubs for those who have distinguished themselves in the classroom; and clubs that pursue academic areas, thereby augmenting class work. In these various groups, the student can follow his interests, focusing clearly on practical experience.

Whenever there is a need for a club, one will be created, for wide interest in extra activities strengthens the school as well as the student. It is vital that the student understand the value of pursuing a variety of interests; they blend to guide him and mold him into a more well-rounded personality.

Through Competent Leadership the Student Council

LEADERSHIP, ABILITY, and intelligence are the qualities exhibited by the current officers of the Student Council. Their many responsibilities are demanding, but they can handle any situation with efficiency and precision. Seated from top to bottom: Robert Coker, Treasurer; Ella Vander Horst, Secretary; Linda Hottum, Girl's Vice President; Danny Adair, Boy's Vice President; Leeba Andrews, President

Immediately following the spring elections, the Student Council officers prepared for their roles as Central's leaders in the coming year

With the advent of fall the Council members plunged vigorously into a program of activities which would fulfill all campaign promises. Improving the appearance of our halls, the Student Council polished Central's multitude of trophies and placed them in their new cases; lockers were numbered for easier identification. Conducted in the early fall, the sale of green and gold "Warrior" sweatshirts, which was a great financial success, provided the funds for many projects. The additions of a mighty "Warrior" head painted on the gym floor and Central's own school flag increased the students' school pride and morale. A spirited Homecoming sparked by a dance and rousing pep meetings and an entertaining Talent Show, which provided the money for new spotlights, were repeated successes from previous years.

This year, as in the past, the students have helped to better Central's reputation through their participation in projects sponsored by the Student Council. They have learned to appreciate the true meaning of being a Centralite.

FULFILLING A CAMPAIGN promise made during the 1962 elections, the Student Council requested one of Central's most talented artists, Karen Pearce, to paint the mighty Warrior on the gym floor. Miss Wallace, Student Council advisor, and Gus Breytspraak, Commissioner-at-Large commend Karen for the fine work she is doing Yearbook Staff Strives Always to Perfect Its Product.

EXULTANT yearbook editors Mike Tramm and Mickey Kaminsky proudly track off the final pages of the Warrior. Their unremitting efforts produced a vibrant yearbook that Centrales will cherish in future years.

AMAZING to the Warrior Yearbook staff members is that these four individuals can remain in high spirits for long desk editor Harriet Galtner and her assistants Shirley Kress and Peggy Calk along with typist Susan Gray, save harder than anyone except maybe the editors in putting out the yearbook.

WORK DONE BY these section editors helped create a better yearbook. SEATED: Stephen Kanarek, Gerry Margo, n Jean Lazarov, Sue Adams, Susan Gratton, Margaret Sadler. STANDING: Elaine Appleton, Jane Council, Jane Mc Burney, Trudy Hofer.

MRS. ELIZABETH MALLOY, yearbook advisor, whose patient and diligent guidance has rewarded us with yearbooks of distinction, comments on Harriet Galtner's layouts. Although Mrs. Malloy's contributions are not fully realized, she deserves our undying gratitude.

Revision is the keynote of the 1963 yearbook. Our competent editors have changed the basic layout of the book to the more versatile three-column style. Another change was increasing the book by several pages in order to give the students a more comprehensive picture of the school year. The editors and the artists collaborated to produce the spectacular cover by use of a new medium in cover designing.

The work of the section editors began in the spring of 1962 when they designed the lay-outs for the coming year. At that time they also participated in the class held for the new assistants.

We hope this yearbook will measure up to the standards set by last year's book in receiving First Class ratings from the National Scholastic Press Association, National Scholastic Yearbook Association, and Columbia Scholastic Press Association.

Improved Technique and Depth Reporting

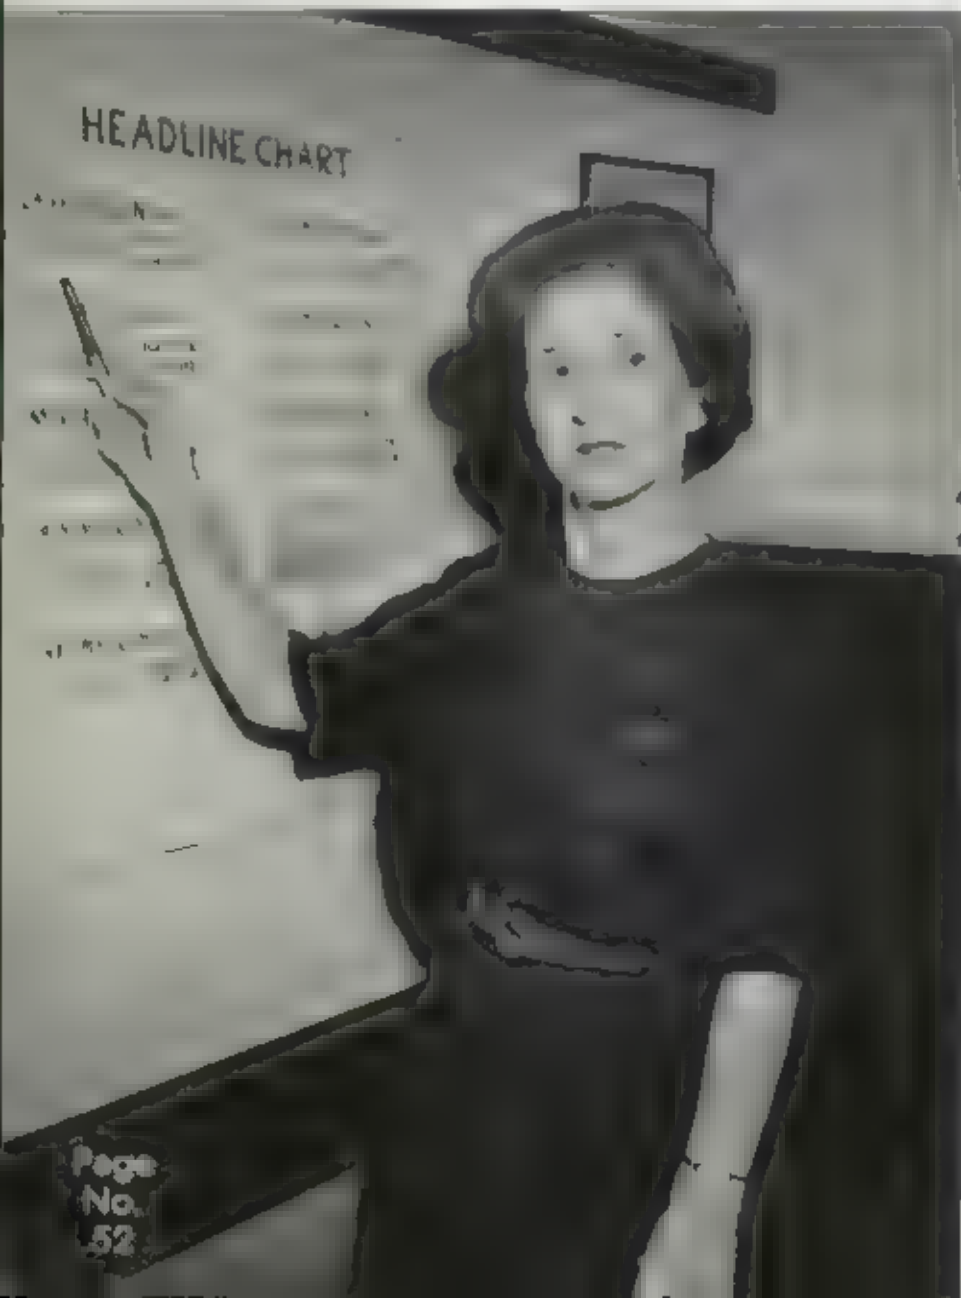

Ninety per cent of the Central High students purchased the Warrior this year, and the number of issues printed increased from nine to thirteen. Other improvements include the changing of the nameplate and the alteration of type to improve style. Each Warrior produces a wide variety of columns—such as Jerry Dupy's hilarious "Assignment: Central;" "Gruen's Doin's," a description of the often-unnoticed landmarks around Centra and the rollicking "Poll Cat," a funny cross-section of the students' remarks concerning a particular question. These "regulars," along with each issue's more serious articles, offer a range of subjects large enough to interest everyone. The newspaper, which exchanges papers with schools in many other states and the Canal Zone, receives many requests to reprint editorials and also offers suggestions to schools which are starting their own newspaper.

ADVISOR to the newspaper staff is Miss Clara Schwamm, who combines her vast knowledge of the mechanics of publications with enthusiasm, patience, and experience to produce first-class papers.

HE DESERVES that honor—Barbara Demster enthusiastically presents her nominee for Captivating Centralite to co-workers Marshall Weissberger, Barbara Tansey, and Peggy Cook before the staff voting begins.

HONEST RELAXATION can be earned only by hard work. Warrior newspaper editors Dean Pope, Managing Editor, and Don Horne, Editor in Chief—certainly have earned their rest. Propping their weary feet on the desk, they smile with satisfaction at their very successful first edition.

Sell those ads! Buy a Warrior! Each autumn the business staff starts promotion and financing of the yearbook and newspaper by presenting the Warrior Kick Off, a skit devoted to the selling of the Warrior. This year a hilarious take-off on West Side Story was presented. The business staff has the dual purposes of selling and financing the newspaper and yearbook. The financing is accomplished through the soliciting of ads and the taking of subscriptions by students. This year a new form of fund-raising was provided by the Fred Montesi contest. This local food store offered a one per cent redemption on all grocery slips brought in by non-profit organizations. A race which developed between all home rooms to see which one could bring in the most slips resulted in raising over $300. Through hard work and shrewd dealings, the business staff always comes through for the yearbook and newspaper.

To Make Honor a Way of Life Is PROUD of the new members which the Honor Society plans to induct during its annual ceremony are the club's officers: Don Horne, Treasurer; Charles Friedman, President; Raymond Spence, Vice-President; and Chris Reveley, Secretary.

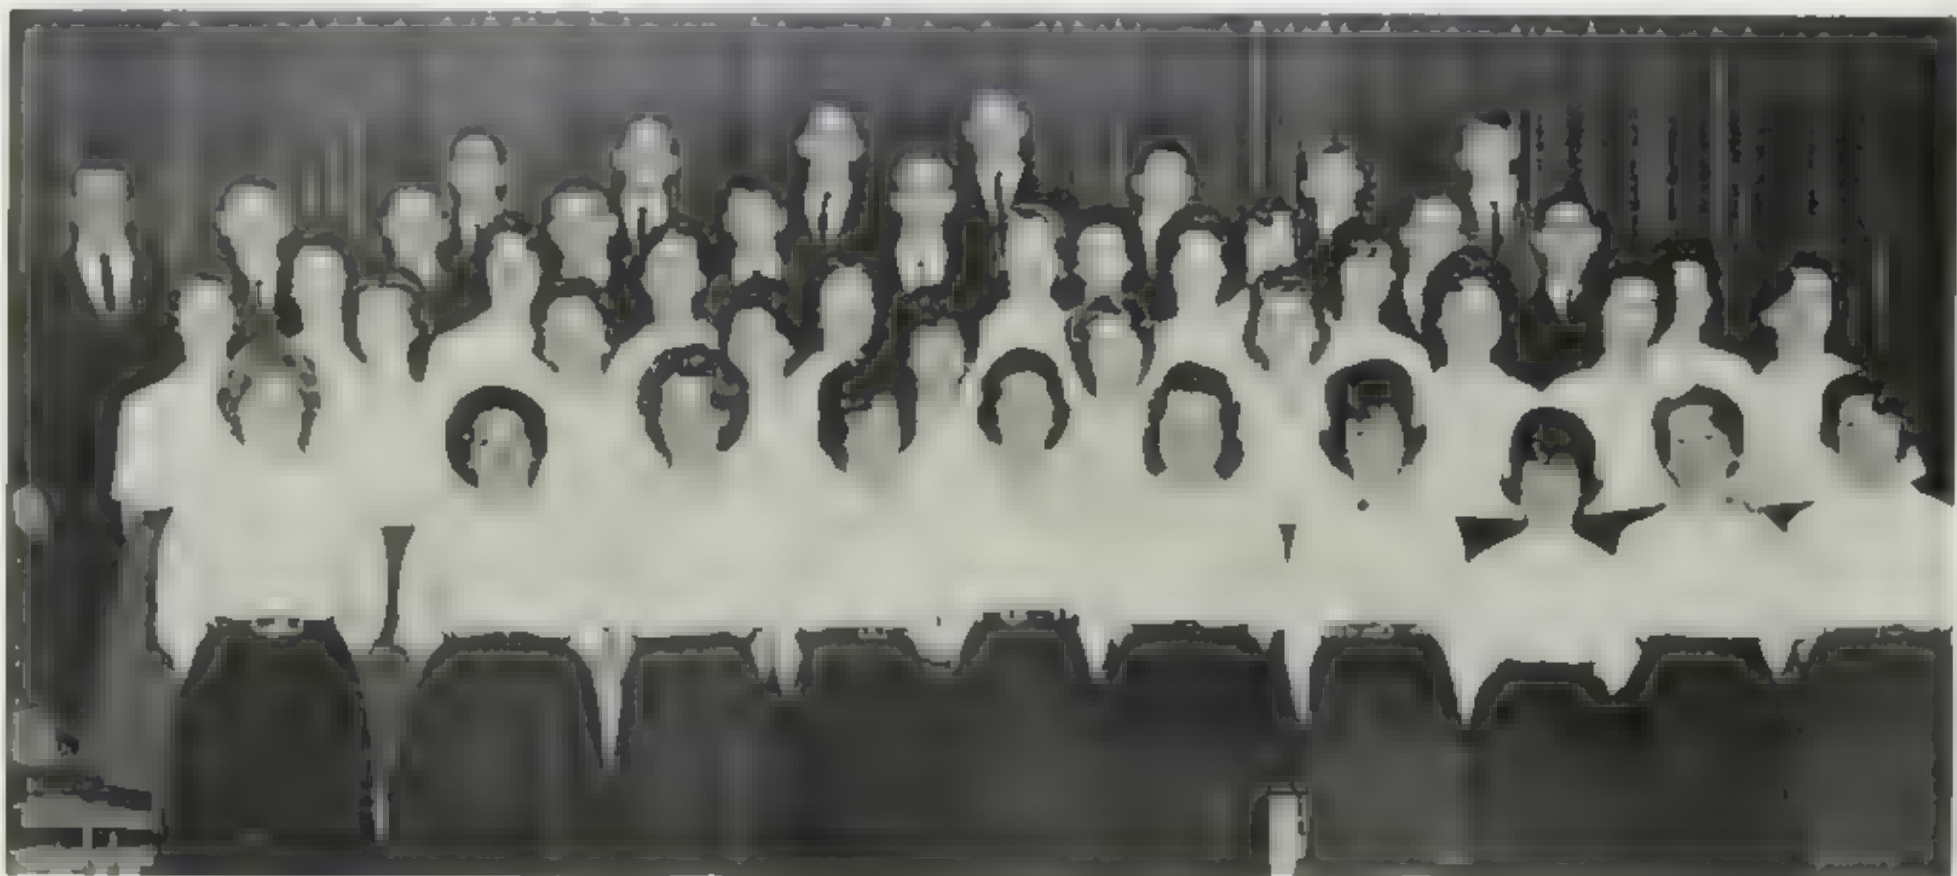

Admission into the Honor Society is the highest honor that can be bestowed upon a Central High student. Formed to encourage scholastic excellence, the Sigma Lambda chapter of the National Honor Society holds scholarship, leadership, character, and service as its ideals. Membership into this elective organization is open to students who have a superior record—a 3.5 average for seniors and a 3.6 average for juniors. During the annual induction each spring, the officers discuss the requirements for admission.

Most of the monthly meetings this year were devoted to discussing the establishment of an honor system, in which each student would pledge to uphold the standards of Central at all times. Mr. Drake, who visited the Air Force Academy last summer, explained at one of the meetings how that school manages a successful honor code.

Other projects are undertaken by the Honor Society members. They maintain a Lost and Found Department, and at the end of the school year auction unclaimed articles. They also send sympathy cards to students and teachers. Each spring a picnic climaxes the year's activities.

Warrior publications members who show outstanding talent in their respective fields are selected for induction into Quill and Scroll, the national honor society for high school journalists. At their monthly meetings these honored members have the opportunity to hear many speakers noted in their field. One of this year's programs was a talk by Mr. Louis Silver, a columnist for the Commercial Appeal and Time-Life correspondent for the Mid-South, about his experiences at the touchy Ole Miss riots. Dr. Wolfe, head of the Southwestern English Department and the foremost expert on Ozark folklore in this area, also spoke to the club. Other highlights of the year were the induction of new members and the annual picnic with the honor society.

QUILL AND SCROLL officers Delanie Ross, Vice-President, Peggy Cook, Treasurer, Barbara Demster, Secretarys and Steve Kanarek, President, fill out invitations for prospective members and discuss and evaluate the qualifications of the new members.

Honorary Memberships in These Clubs.

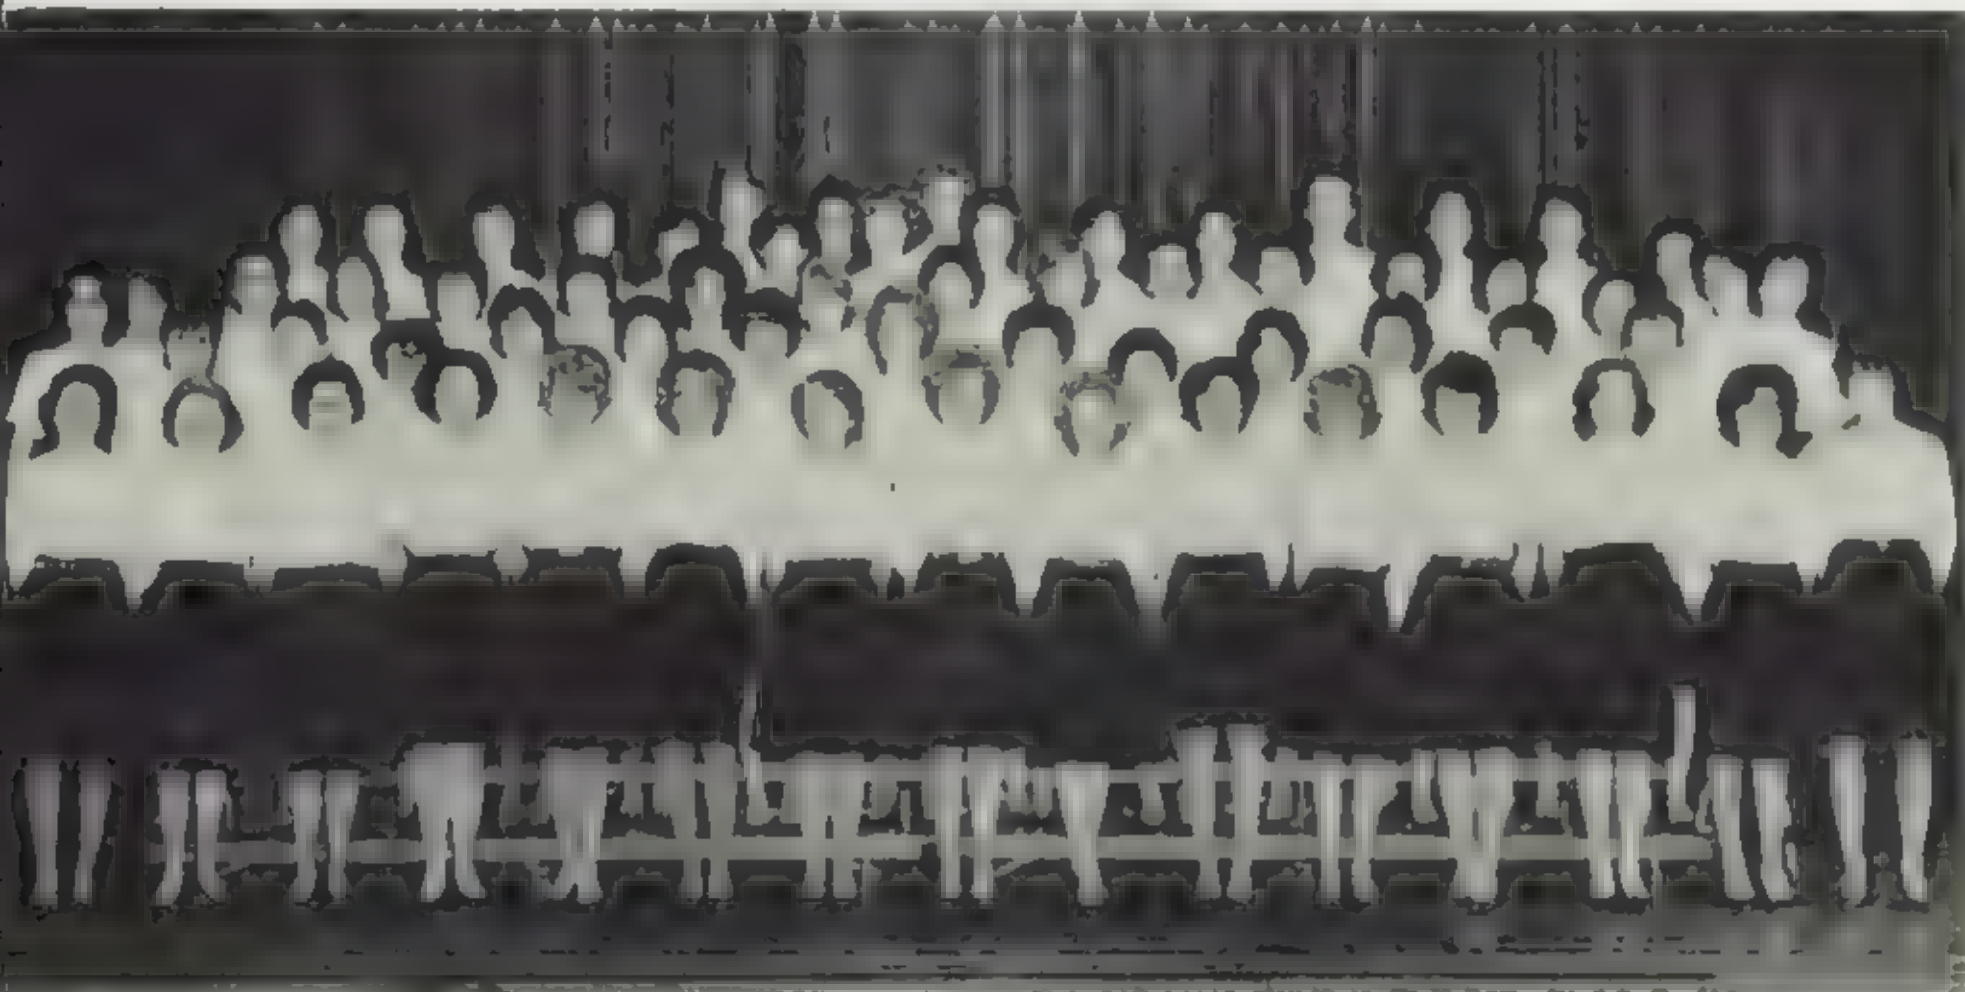

Encouraging students who are majoring in business to continue and perfect their work is the main goal of the Business Club. The club, co-sponsored by Mrs. Guthrie and Miss Crenshaw, offers membership by invitation only. The members are required to maintain a high average and an active participation in the activities of the club. The principal activity is the publication of the "Herald Central" a directory containing the names, addresses, and phone numbers of the faculty and entire student body. The club has a new project this year "Warrior Wall" an achievement board marking a student's progress in building character and academic ability. When a girl has performed an outstanding service for the club she is eligible for a brick in the wall. Each time she improves her character in some way, her brick, which is first placed at the bottom of the wall, will be moved to a higher position.

BEFORE THE PROOF sheets of the "Herald Central" are sent to the printer, Business Club officers Donna Ery, Treasurer; Linda Wicks, Vice President; Barbara Tansley, General Secretary; Barbara Lister, Recording Secretary; and Roscoe Baker, President, conduct a double check of names and numbers.

in the Jets, the Thespians, and the Math Club.

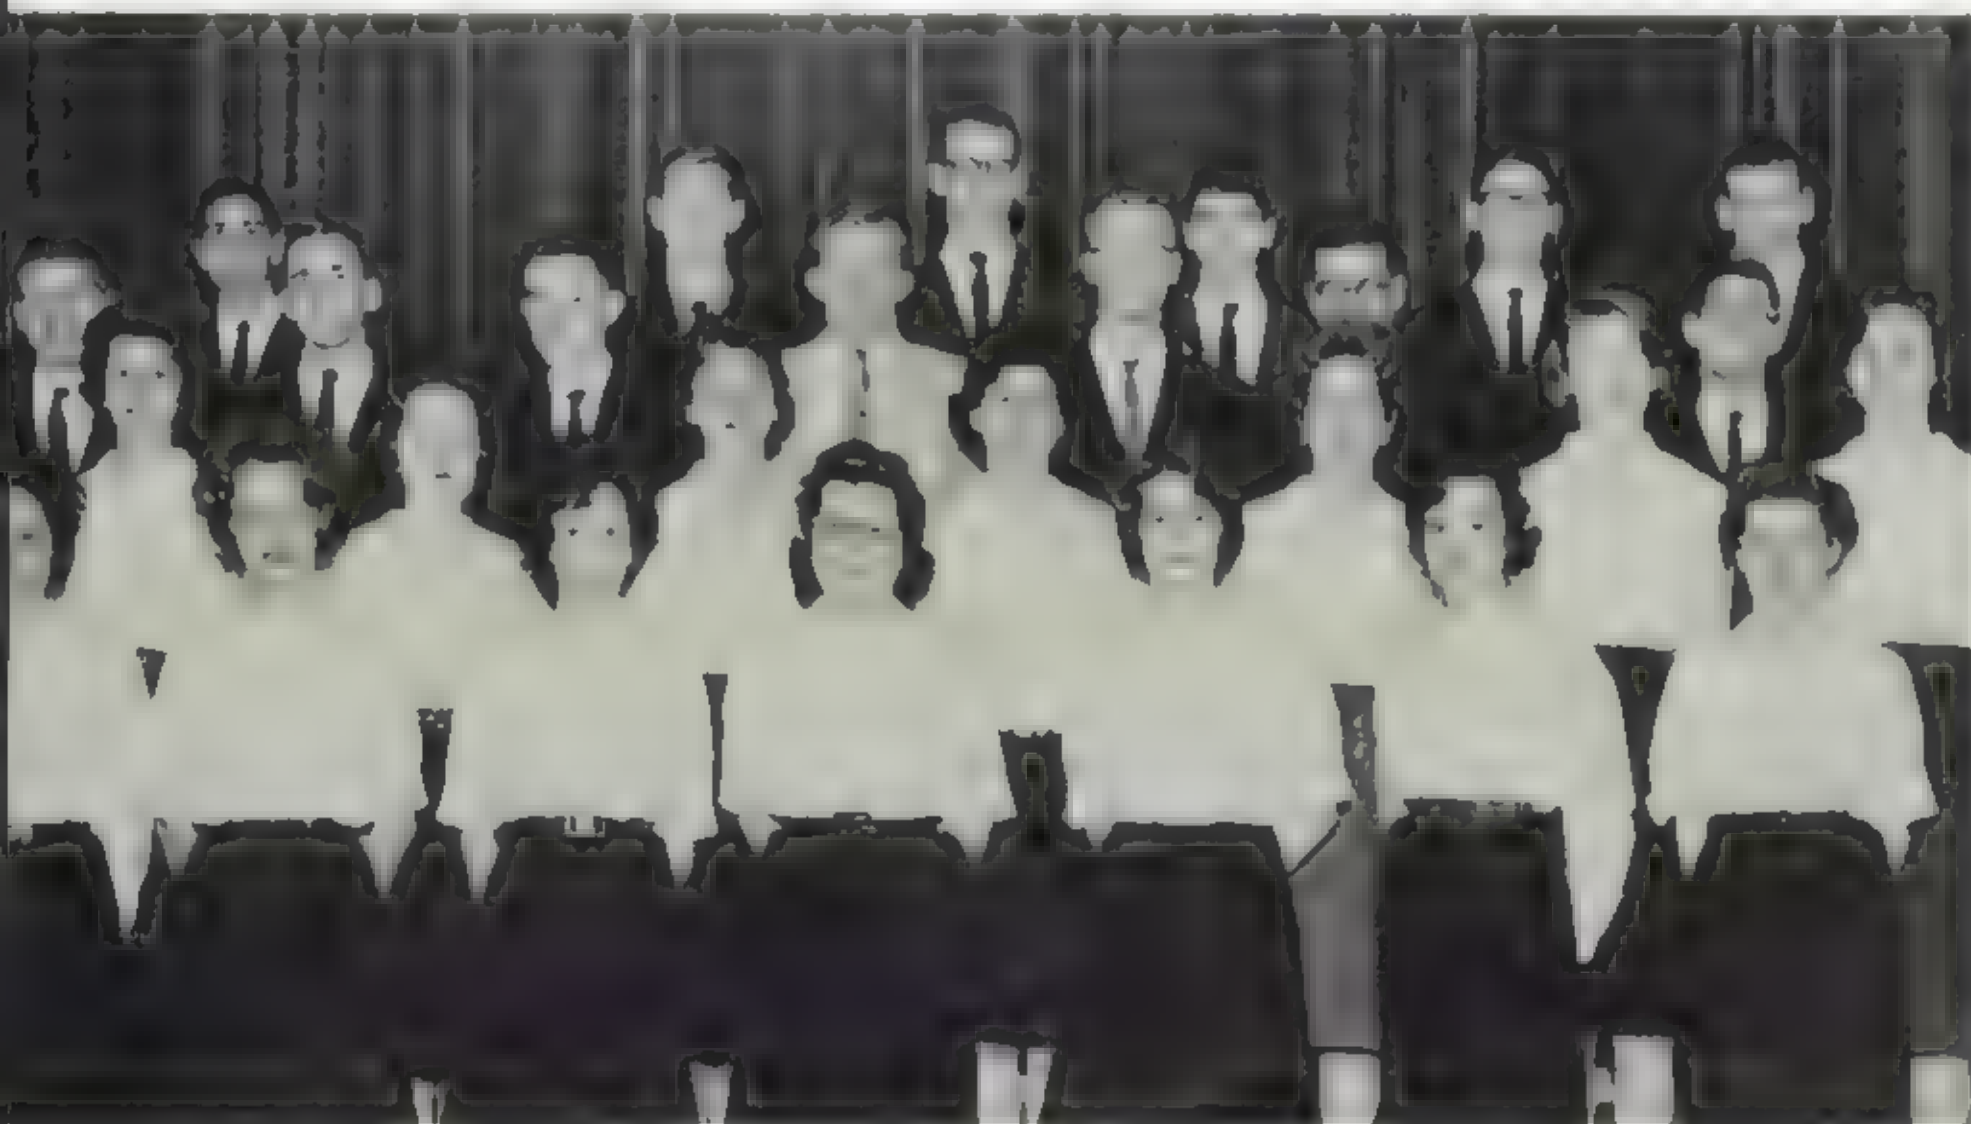

Under the leadership of president Paul Sisco, the Math Club has had an active year of projects and programs. The club compiles homeroom standings and the honor roll list, and has made attractive new banners for honor homerooms. Monthly meetings held at various members' homes supplement their activities at school. Dr. Kaltenborn, chairman of the Memphis State University math department, gave a lecture and demonstration on probability at an early fall meeting. For a change-of-pace program, several members prepared comprehensive and fascinating talks concerning infinity. The first annual West Tennessee Mu Alpha Theta convention, held in Memphis, climaxed the year's work.

The Homeroom Presidents' Club, which meets regularly during activity period, is one of the most active groups in the school. One of the purposes of the club is to arouse homeroom participation in service to our school and community. By collecting canned food and money, the students provide a joyous Christmas for needy families. The annual clean-up campaign encourages students to take pride in a spotless cafeteria. Another annual event is Perfect Day, when students and teachers work together for an ideal school day.

The Y-Teens, an organization sponsored by the Y.W.C.A., welcomes all girls who like to participate in a program of sports and of cultural activities. Through dances, outings, and other social events, this club provides fun and fellowship for its members. Interesting guest speakers at the regular meetings talk to the girls about fashions, careers, and college.

Leadership and Musical Abilities.

From August to June—this is the length of a band member's school year. A month of practice and training sessions before the first football game transformed green Freshmen and seasoned Seniors into the polished, well-coordinated marching band that created vigor and color on the gridiron.

Changing from marching uniforms into concert outfits, the band plunged into concentrated performance work. After presenting a fall concert which featured selections for West Side Story, they played for the production of Hit the Deck. Last year's dance band was revived, providing an accompaniment for several Talent Show acts.

The ability of the 1962-63 band was proven when band members were chosen to the West Tennessee Band and six won coveted All-State positions.

CHARLE CLARK AND John Brindley, portraying the on-again-off-again sweethearts, Lavinia and Junior of Hit the Deck!, wordlessly demonstrate their mutual affection before bartender Jimmy Mitchell, aka's Sloppy Robert.

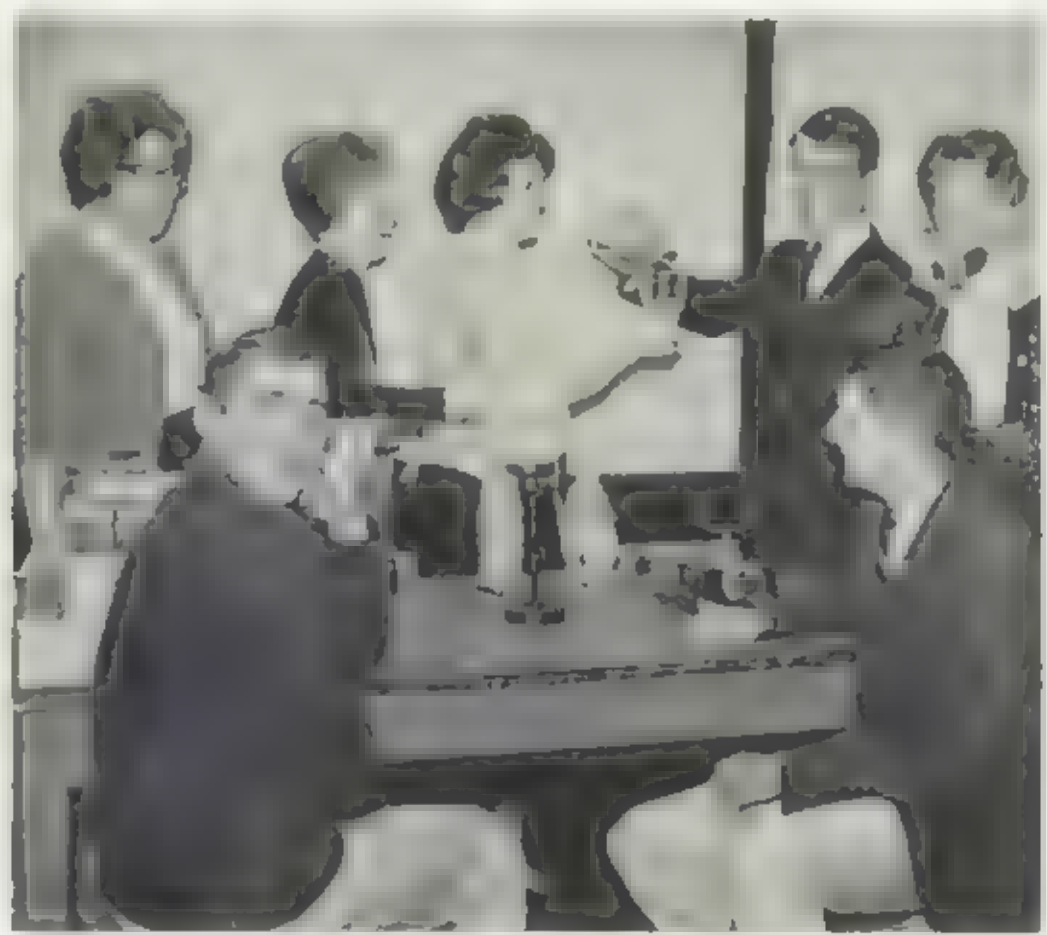

"Curtain going up!" Hanging on the arms of jolly sailors, prissy girls in flapper dresses sauntered across the stage to the accompaniment of the tinny music of the Roaring Twenties; the music department's rollicking production of Hit the Deck! had begun. A musical comedy portraying life in a seafaring town of the good old days, Hit the Deck! delighted Centralites with the thrill of seeing a Broadway show re-enacted by their own class-mates and gave them an idea of the intricate planning necessary for quality presentations.

Following their successful venture into show business, the choir participated in the All-State Music Festival and the West Tennessee Music Festival. Reviving a former Central tradition, they caroled through the halls at Christmas. Climaxing the year's activities, they presented a Spring Concert of classical and modern music.

Tomorrow's star is a student today.' For those students who are sincerely interested in dramatics, the Speech Club offers the opportunity of actually getting behind the scenes and seeing the manner in which a real production is managed. By attending theater parties as invited guests at the Front Street Theater, the members are able to view experienced actors and actresses in professional performances. Receiving the valuable benefits of these parties, the club members are able to improve their own plays. Interesting speakers visit the monthly meetings and give advice and helpful knowledge to our club members.

Developing mental powers and matching wits with able opponents give great pleasure to the Chess Club members. Sponsored by Miss Jones, the club extends its membership to any student interested in furthering his knowledge about "the game of kings." Besides discussing the fundamentals of the game at the monthly meetings, the members wage a continuous chess match. Tournaments between club members last for weeks, and at the end they proclaim one member champion. Professional players frequently advise the members about the finer points of the game. Our club members often challenge those from other schools.

Scientific-minded Students Explore the Fields

"AND THE PATIENT I'm happy to say survived the operation," recounts Dr. R. L. Sanders, surgeon and guest speaker of the Future Physicians' Club. Interested Central students attend these informative meetings and actively support the club's annual charity projects and parties.

"I THINK THESE are bronchial tubes," says Barry Keathy. He and the other Future Physicians' Club officers—Linda Wood, Melvin Posey, Florence Petree and Linda Sallee—examine an X-ray like many of those they will see as doctors.

By visiting and observing an efficient hospital, members of the Future Physicians' Club acquire knowledge that will be of future value. Regular meetings of interested students are held at the Baptist Hospital. Here technicians and hospital personnel guide them through the hospital from the morgue to the emergency and operating rooms and explain the latest techniques and equipment. Renowned doctors address the members and show them authentic films of operations.

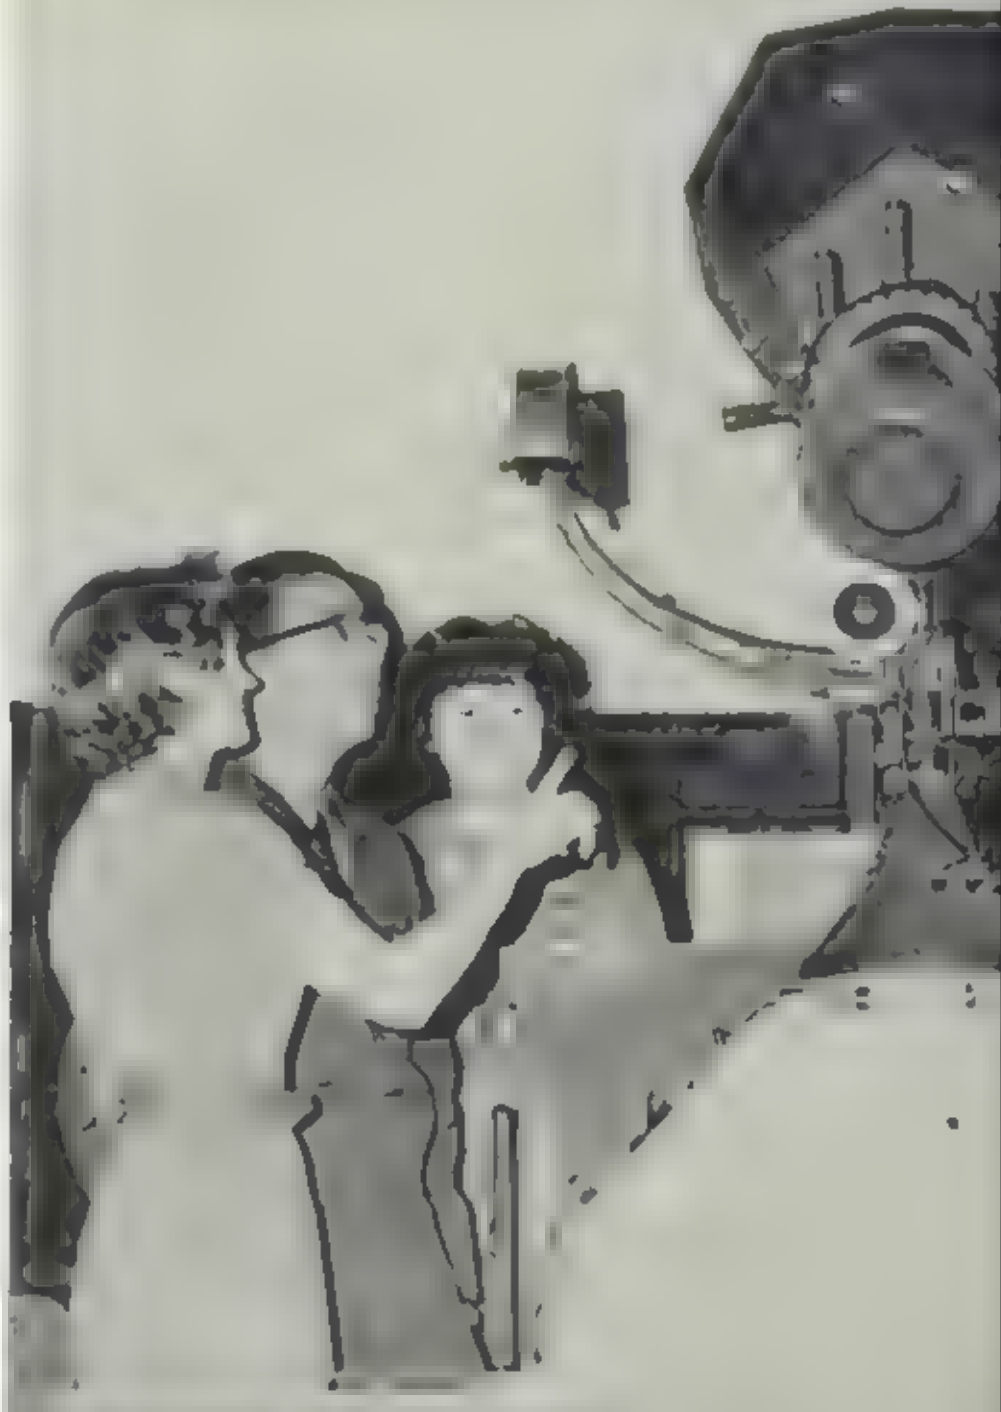

Taking a break from the serious activities of the club, members gave a party at the home of a Centralite, where they entertained members from other city schools. During the Christmas season they gave a party for the children of the Frank T. Tobey Hospital, where refreshments and entertainment were provided.

of Biology and Medicine.

BASIDIOMYCETES for breakfast? Mushrooms are not quite that popular among Biology Club officers Calvin Jones, Margaret Goessling, Janice Minner, and Lana Snyder! At the monthly meeting, planned by these officers, the members pursue the study of biological subjects.

With programs varying from guest speakers to field trips the Biology Club stimulates interest in the field of biological sciences and provides information concerning vocational opportunities. A student's interest and curiosity are satisfied whether he is interested in zoology or the study of Agaricus campestris. With films, field trips, tours, and demonstrations, club members are able to supplement their present knowledge of biology. This year the club also branched into the field of astronomy with a fascinating trip to the Planetarium.

"MECHANICAL ROBOT" Of course not," laughs Mrs. Ann Answorth, instructor at the Memphis Museum, as she explains the intricate structure of the planetarium projector to Biology Club members Norman Yee and Martha Schmitz.

Club Parties Make the Study of Languages

FRENCH CLUB president Patty Paschall and Robert Rajon, an exchange student at Memphis State University, engage in a lively conversation "en francaise." The French Club was very much interested in Monsieur Rajon's thorough analysis of the current Algerian problem.

DRESSED IN THE billowy costumes of the Russian peasants, Janis Baker and Helen Moore wait for their cue at a program presented by the International Club, an organization sponsored by the University of Tennessee to bring together the foreign citizens of Memphis.

Lively monthly meetings spiced with varied programs, skits, and parties make the French Club one of Central's most active organizations. Exchange students, always interesting and enlightening, skits presented by different classes, and explorations into the history and customs of France form the basis for these meetings. A gala banquet in the spring brings the year's activities to a close.

Throughout the year the Russian Club provides its members with varied and fascinating programs. Sponsored by a native Russian, Mrs. Tamara Miller, the Russian Club is a member of the International Club program. One of this year's activities consisted of the showing of slides smuggled out of Russia. The club also presented a program of Russian folk songs at Trinity Methodist Church.

an Exciting Adventure.

FROM THE ROLLING plains of the Argentine pampas to the skyscrapers of Rio de Janeiro, Spanish-speaking souls come alive as Miss Schell shows to the Spanish Club what was taken on her trip to Argentina last summer. Others assisting are Robert Martinez, President; Donna Ervin, Secretary; Barbara Tansley, Treasurer; and Harla Kaplan, Vice President.

Members of the Spanish Club delve into the past to learn about the customs and traditions of the Spanish people and their native lands. Films and talks presented at their monthly meetings are both instructional and entertaining. A regular feature of the annual Christmas party is the traditional breaking of the pinata, a large paper mache decoration filled with cookies, candy, and prizes.

The Latin Club offers students a wide range of information concerning ancient Rome plus the fun of participating in programs and the annual Roman Banquet. Each spring a delegation is sent to the Junior Classical League Convention in Nashville to participate in discussion groups and in contests. At this time state officers are elected. Last spring David Myers, Central chapter president, was elected state-wide president.

PROGRESS TO FREEDOM: These are some of the victories after you, says David Myers as he explains to Kathy Davis the pinata he used to win the state-wide presidency of the mother organization of all the Latin Clubs.

Students Gain Vocational Experience Through

Any student who is interested in broadcasting and communications may join Central's Radio Club to take advantage of the excellent activities that it provides. He is fortunate to have access to the fine equipment and machinery that is the property of the Radio Department.

Field trips to various radio, television, and testing stations are the main activities sponsored by the club this year. On these trips professional technicians answer any questions that the members may have. On one Friday night in each six-weeks period, a club meeting is held at school from 8 P.M. to 1 A.M. Here "ham" operators from all over this country and other countries are contacted, and messages and greetings are exchanged. Radio operators in Holland, Australia, and even Russia have been reached.

Besides taking an interest in constructing and operating their own radio equipment, the club members take much pride in repairing their instruments. They also make periodic check-ups of the radio tower at Central.

RADIO CLUB MEMBERS realize the importance of good equipment such as this oscilloscope. At the monthly meetings club officers Bobby Beeman, Delmar Ihle, Jerry Kulbeth, Carl Nuckolls, and Chris Curry better acquaint themselves with complex radio equipment.

USING A VOLTMETER to check the power of the radio, David Stevenson smiles as he discovers it to be in perfect working order. Radio Club members made this and other radio equipment, including their own "ham" radio station.

BY USING a sheet-metal bender, Jerry Minon forms the chassis for a radio receiving set. Club members spend many after-school hours constructing equipment of high quality.

CATEGORIZING and shelving books is an essential part of the work done by Library Club officers Donna Ervin, Margaret Sadler, Tim Mowry, and Dayna Buechner, who assist Miss Crump in club activities and general library maintenance

Sponsored by Miss Crump, the Library Club is one of the newest and most active groups in the school. By giving up their study halls to help Miss Crump in her daily duties, these members assist in maintaining an orderly and quiet library for study and also repair books that have been torn or abused

Interesting programs are planned for the monthly meetings. Occasionally, to vary the usual discussion of library problems and latest library procedures, professional critics are invited to review current books

During the Christmas holidays, the members entertained the Girls' Club. To culminate a successful year, the club held a book fair, during which hundreds of paperback books were sold to students and their parents to help raise money for the club

"WE'RE NUMBER ONE!" Pep Club officers Sue Mitchell, Cheryl Moore, and Rosalyn Baker are confident that Central's city football championship was won only because of the Pep Club's loyal support!

Promoting school spirit and decorating the school before game time are but a few of the activities sponsored by the Pep Club. Meeting weekly during football season, the members make posters and banners to help publicize each game and to increase school spirit. It is also a duty of the club members on the day of a game to attach green and gold streamers to the goal posts and to decorate the stadium. Members, sitting in a designated section of the stands during the game, lend support to the team by leading the spectators in cheers.

The "H" Club, Central's oldest club, was organized in 1911 to honor those boys who show superior athletic abilities. Membership in this organization is open to any outstanding student who shows good sportsmanship in addition to athletic prowess. At the Christmas banquet, the main project of the year, letters are distributed to members. At that time a trophy is given to each of the outstanding athletes of the year.

SCHOOL LIFE

Utilizing posterboards, paint and quantities of midnight oil, earnest politicians create carloads of campaign materials which bedeck the stairs and halls during Student Council elections. Though the hurry of these tension-filled days tests the limits of a student's physical capacity, it generates in him a boundless energy and enthusiasm. With the climax of the week, the posting of election results, the strain is relieved and the students settle down to serious study.

While participating in elections, productions, club projects, and sporting activities, the Centralite demonstrates repeatedly his ability to put aside the immediate business of getting an education to dedicate himself to enjoying his interests. This year's language club cabaret, the chorus-production of "Hit the Deck," the Talent Show, and championship performances by the athletic teams further illustrate the versatility of Central's students. The exuberance and levity of youth are clearly evident in the Centralite who thrives on working and having fun as he develops his potentials.

Reverberating with Rousing Spirit,

WWARRIORS, Warriors! Yeah! Stirring the enthusiasm of the student body to still greater proportions with Central's very own yell, the cheerleaders provide a proper finale for a spirited pep meeting, the first one of the year. Their effervescence plainly shows that leading cheers can be just as much fun as following them in the audience.

"SO THIS IS THE MACHINE that caused all the trouble," Cristina Murt and Bobby Manuel watch Mr. Ed French demonstrate the use of the Radio-Recorder at the Board of Education. This year a new program was begun in the city schools as schedules were prepared for students by this accurate recorder.

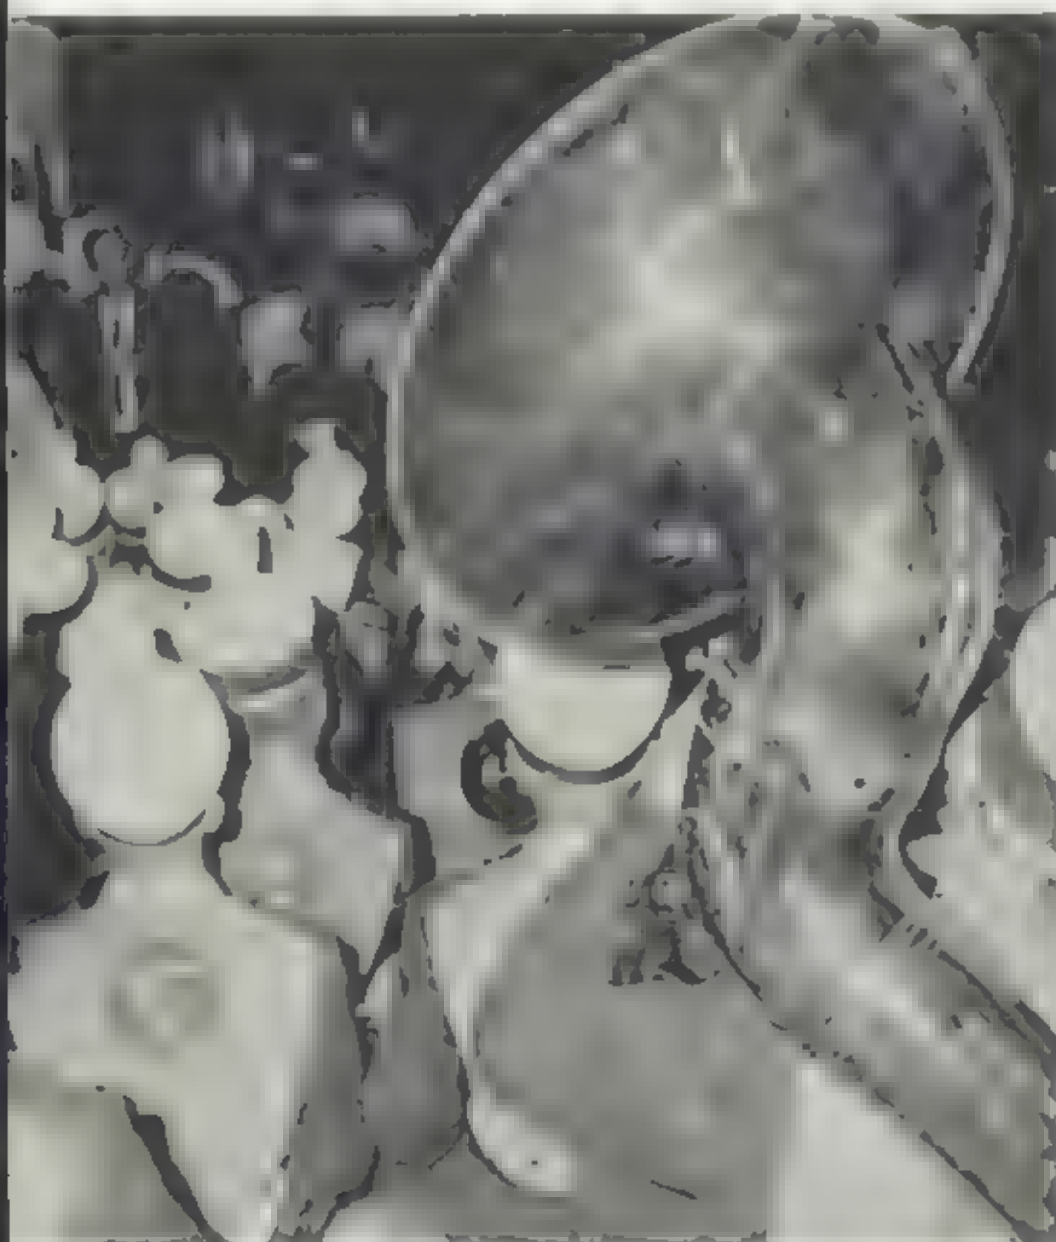

Towering oaks and elms surrounding our campus are still a summery green. Yet, September is here and again it is time for Central's students to gather in her halls. Summer vacation with its leisurely pace is now only a memory. New horizons beckon us on, as each new day brings new experiences. Football fields come alive with fighting Warriors. The student body, crowding in the bleachers, cheer wildly for their team. Soon, our band and chorus begin rehearsals for Hit the Deck, the musical to be presented in December. Then, too, the language department has a project. Their fun-filled cabaret will provide an evening of gaiety for those interested in continental atmosphere. School Life has a flavor of its own. In activities outside the classroom, students are still full of the spirit of Central High.

Central's Halls Once Again Come to Life.

DOM PAH DOM PAH. Central's big tuba joins the band in beating out a victory tune under the direction of Mr. Ragsdale. Proudly displaying Central's emblem on their new green and gold uniforms, band members back our football team with vigorous, spirited sounds.

STEP RIGHT UP ladies and gentlemen! Get your football program here! Band member Andy Ballard doesn't really need a sales pitch. His class alone has attracted enough customers to sell a lot of his programs.

Many Varied Projects Fill Busy Days

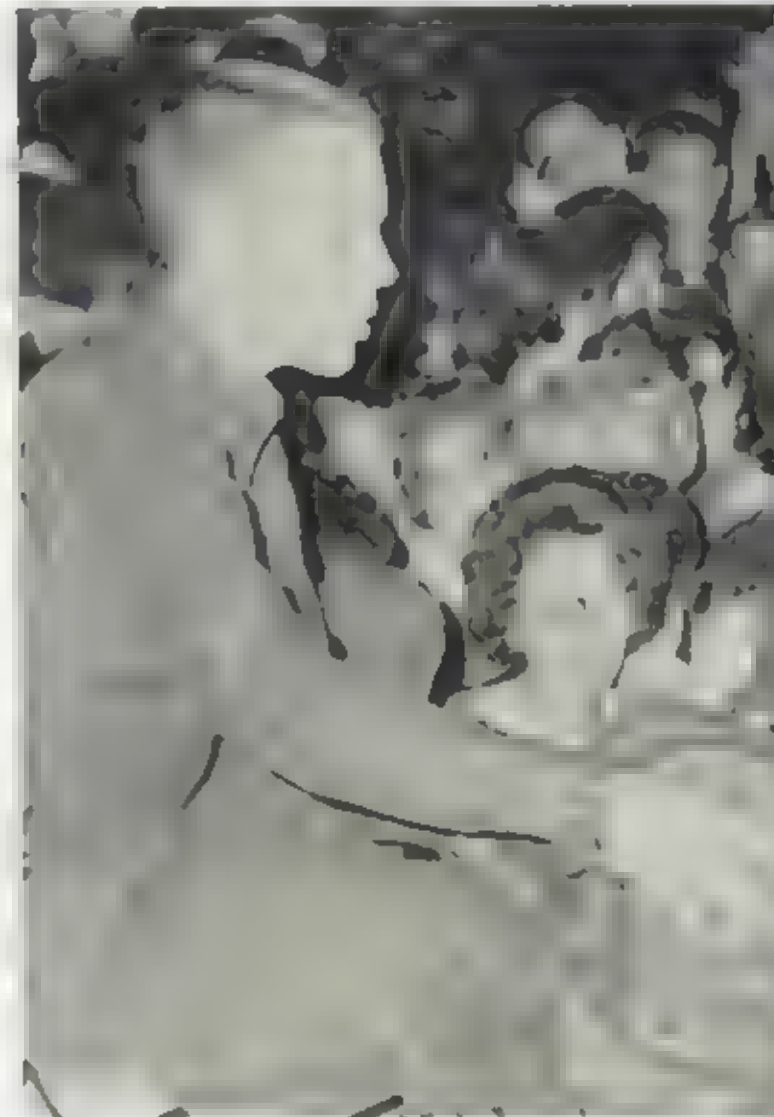

TRICK OR TREAT? Much to everyone's general amazement on Halloween these witches and goblins treated rather than tricked the young patients at the Crippled Children's Hospital. Actually members of Central's Speech Club the 'sneaks' entertained with refreshments, songs and a very twist exhibition.

THIS MAY LOOK like just another party but actually a great deal of work is being accomplished by the frolicking Pep Club members. These industrious Centralites happily spend weekday evenings painting posters and notices to promote on this astic backing of our football team.

Harassed by mobs of eager students she will deny Cooper undertake the task of helping Student Council members distribute green and gold Central sweatshirts. This September sale was such a success that it was repeated in November.

Mischief and Enthusiasm in Centralites.

With all its delicate colors and fragrances, spring is a difficult season to describe, but never is it hard to recognize at Central High School. A new lightness springs in the steps of Seniors newly accepted at their favorite colleges. Mischief is in the air, with practical jokes reigning supreme. Yet, serious thoughts cross Juniors' minds as they begin to consider college plans. Carefree Freshmen, thinking high school is eternal, will soon enough realize that every day counts. When yearbooks arrive, the school whirls in a flurry of autograph-signing. Freshman and Junior Class parties provide evenings full of laughter. Inescapable exams loom darkly around the corner, but they, too, finally come to an end. Thinking over the past year, we realize we have accomplished a lot. Now the spring has stolen its moments away. Graduation is upon us; summer is ahead. But the spring has been generous and has given us treasures we can cherish forever—memories.

"OK, ON THE COUNT of three hoist it over!" The first warm weather often brings out the best, or worst, in practical jokers. With mischievous gleams in their eyes, these boys prepare to surprise Penny Harrington by reparking her car on the sidewalk.

PINK BUNNY-RABBITS with girl faces, apples piled high, students and teachers alike beaming—not one of these things is surprising on a Perfect Day at Central. For the past two years this special day has been set aside so that both faculty and students may cooperate to make every day a better one.

Confusion, Fun, and Fond Memories

OOHS' AND AAHS echo through Central's cafeteria as the hard-working publication staffs get a first look at shiny new 1961-1962 yearbooks the day before general distribution of the yearbooks.

After months of waiting for this moment, no one is disappointed. These yearbooks, which represent months of painstaking preparation, make all the time and energy spent on them seem worthwhile.

WHAT? Has Central started its own physical fitness program? No, these bicycles were left by celebrating seniors who were leaving Central behind — their last moments at Central. Biking along

SPORTS

Seventy steps to go, and coming down is almost as rough! Whether playing football, basketball, or baseball or running track, the athlete's extra hours are spent in work-out, practice, or strategy sessions. By upholding rigid standards, Central's coaching staff continually produces the winning teams which promote school spirit and increase prestige. Though the student body feels the true enthusiasm of a contest only at the games, to the athlete these are but a series of high points.

The well-rounded athletic program, which includes seven sports, is an important part of Central's diversity. The physical abilities and mental attitudes acquired on the playing field maintain a position equal in significance to the development in the classroom.

Just as the players, with their varied talents combine to form an effective team, the various teams take their seasonal positions and blend with concurrent activities to form the facets of life at Central.

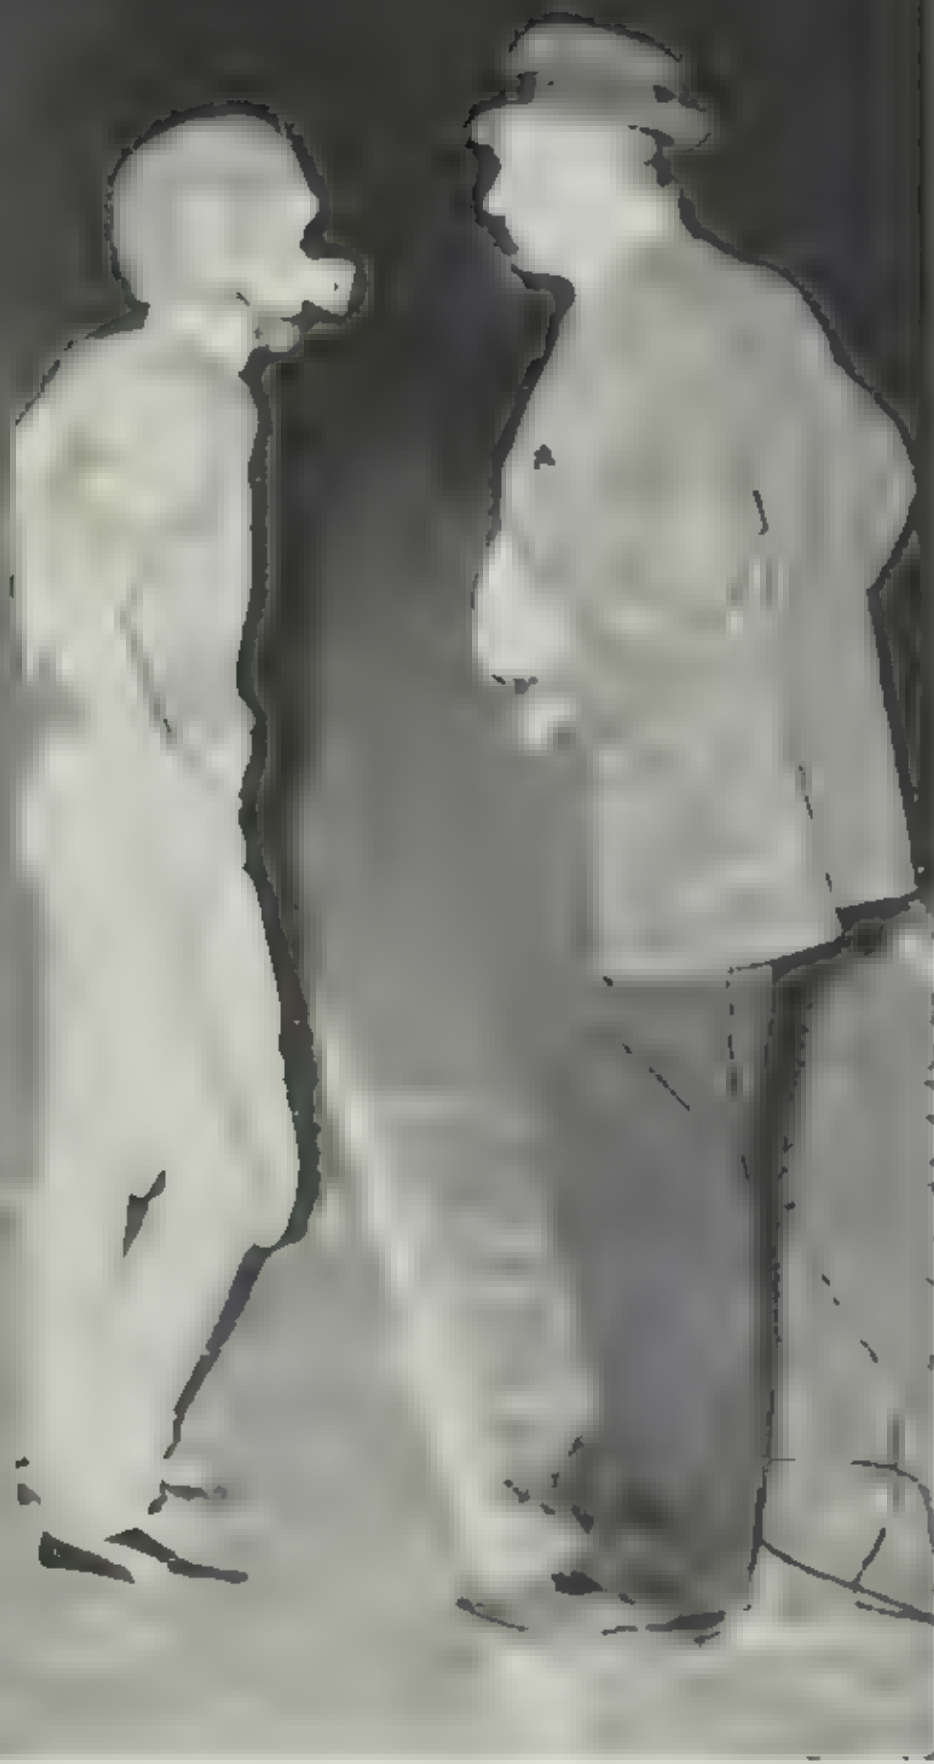

Brothers Crumble and

Although "Beat the Brothers" was the determined Central war-cry when the game began, it was a stunned Central team that took the walk to the opposite end of the field as the first quarter ended. The Warriors, who had torn through the first half of their schedule without a loss, had been stopped cold in their tracks by a CBC team that looked entirely too polished and well-oiled to be a Prep League team. They hit Central through holes in the line and devastated the defense with the seemingly unstoppable pitch-out play. Warrior backs hit the Brother line and found only a stone wall. Central, in fact, was never in the game. The old CBC nemesis seemed again to be popping up like a bad dream to ruin a great season.

"Scene Two" of the drama which tells the story of the '62 season took place on Thanksgiving Day with the same cast of characters and the same setting. Only the script had changed, and the tables were turned in this Prep Championship game. This time it was the fired up Central gridders who out-knocked, out-ran, and out-passed the overwhelmed Brothers and looked like the mighty Warriors of old, "undisputable champions of the Prep League." The aerial attack was superb, and the backfield ripped through the Brother line behind tenacious Warrior blocking. The CBC offense never got off the ground, and CBC backs were smothered when they tried the formerly powerful pitch-out.

Central's one loss had been avenged by a team that was too determined and too great to be denied the championship.

FOR 26 YEARS the outcome of Central's grid battles has been decided on the sidelines where games are said to be won or lost. Coach Ruffner Murray, holding a sideline conference with quarterback Don Deaton, has piled up the most remarkable record of any other coach in the Prep League.

Cheerleaders Spark Central Gridders to Tradition has it that Central High always loses to Nashville Issac Litton High at the beginning of the season. Also, according to tradition, the outcome of the game proves nothing about the Warriors' season prospects, for it is an accepted fact that West Tennessee teams show poorly against Eastern powers. When Central won its second game of the season by beating Litton for the first time in seven years, Warrior fans were more puzzled than elated. Had the supposedly indestructible Eastern team merely slipped up?

The following three wins proved nothing to eager Central fans. They were, in fact, discouraged, since Tech scored on the Warriors for the first time in thirteen years.

QUARTERBACK KEEPERS in the Warrior attack were more than the usual "one yard and a cloud of dust" play with Don Deaton running behind such powerful blockers as Jimmy Reay and Billy Grove. Deaton shocked Warrior opposition on the keeper with breathtaking runs of 55 and 61 yards.

ADORING CHEERLEADERS provide tender loving care for Central's symbol of prep gridiron supremacy as they caress the trophy which they helped return to Central. The cheerleaders are Judy Cobb, Suzanne Hague, Bobby Williams, Julia Lazenby, Tommy Bronson, Jim Turner, Captain Chris Reveley, Liz Ann Daehlin, Captain Roma Leah Trobaugh, and Ginger Moss.

Outstanding Individual Performances.

It took a fourth-quarter desperation pass from Deaton to Riley to squeak past Humes 13-12. With a 5-0 record the Warriors had their first real test against CBC. Central soundly trounced, was out of the game after the first quarter. It looked as if the experts were indeed correct in predicting a mediocre season. To come back and win the Division Championship seemed impossible: all four remaining games were against prep powerhouses. It was a momentous task, but the Warriors were equal to it. In the game with Messick, Central crushed the Panthers on the first play from scrimmage with a razzle-dazzle 60-yard touchdown pass from Riley to Treace. Frayser's single-wing also fell victim to the Warriors. Undefeated South Side nearly stopped the Redmen as the Scappers led 12-0 with only 4½ minutes left in the game. The determined Warriors came back, however, as Don Deaton threw two touchdown bullet passes, and Raymond Spence's extra points provided the margin of victory. Disposing of the Terriers in the regular season finale, the Warriors achieved what had seemed impossible and moved into the Championship Game.

DURING THE FINAL quarter of the Thanksgiving Day game, Warrior pass defenders like Jimmy Riley seemed to come from nowhere to break up CBC's desperate attempts to score on long passes.

Mid-season Slump

Though the 1963 Warrior cagers showed sparks of greatness, the team never hit full stride. It was a year of ups and downs in which a mid-season slump ruined hopes for the city title. In search of a starting combination which could click with consistent wins, Coach Fortner often juggled the lineup. The closing games of the season found Sammy Reid, Fred Bartliff, and Jimmy Stewart—three talented boys who had previously seen only B-Team action—revitalizing the Warrior attack. Reid looked sensational in the Frayser and Humes games, in which he had twenty-point nights. Lack of experience did not seem to bother Bartliff, for he broke into the starting lineup immediately after he became eligible at mid-season. Stewart's spectacular backcourt play was giving Warrior opposition headaches until an injury forced him to retire to the sidelines. Throughout the entire year Duane Anderson and Marvin Palmer bolstered the lineup by their performances. Anderson, the team's high-scorer, finished the season with a 17.1 point average—good for fifth in the city. Prep experts consider Palmer, a top rebounder, "the most improved in the League." Consistent help from the bench came in the form of Richard Sanders, Richard Mollerup, Dennis Goodwin, and Gene Fulghum. Though the Warriors went all out for the city title, 1963 is considered by many to have been a rebuilding year.

DEFT FINGERS and taut muscles of three Recmen create this weird picture of strain and sweat as they grapple for a loose ball. Hustle of the type promoted by Coach Fortner seldom allows a ball to roll into the hands of an opponent without at least one Warrior's making a desperate lunge for the ball and leaving considerable skin on the hardwood.

BASKETBALL PHOBIA seems suddenly to have gripped "bug-eyed" Bobby Henderson, Richard Sanders, and Marvin Palmer, who are seized with an hysterical fear of getting close to the ball. Warrior fans watched confidently as the Central cagers methodically disposed of their first seven opponents. All the factors necessary for a championship team seemed to be present in the '62 squad: a high-scoring guard, speed to work the fast break and zone press, and a 6' 5"—6' 3"—6' 2" forward wall. The winning streak placed Central in a tie with Frayser for first. When the Warriors downed the Rams in their next meeting, they took sole possession of the top spot. Lightning struck in the next game, however, as underdog Westside shocked the Warriors and handed them their first loss. The defeat was the beginning of a long and disastrous slump. The Warriors, suddenly turning ice-cold, dropped six of their next eight games. The downhill skid ended when the Warriors eked past South Side. Gaining momentum, the squad won by two points, then nine, then thirty, then eighty six! With two final wins over Westside and Frayser the Warriors finished second in the division and were well on their way to being a top contender in the tournaments.

Keep Football Boys in Top Condition

ALTHOUGH VISITORS to the gym may be stunned by the odd behavior of the football boys, the team's antics are part of the revitalized football track program. Coach Williams is directing this group in a knee bending exercise the difficulty of which is increased by the added weight of a teammate.

BLOOD-SHOT EYES and waterlogged limbs are all occupational hazards to Bill Bailey—who, as the Warrior's first man in the fifty yard butterfly event, posted an impressive win in his event in Centra's twin meet victory over South Side.

COACH JOHN HARDY reviews tactics and lends encouragement in one of his customary pre-game strategy sessions with the starting battery, Jim Graham and Robert Finley. Coach Hardy, whose dugout leadership was a major factor in the success of the '62 squad, has racked up an impressive 54-12 record in only four years at Central.

Season of Near Misses

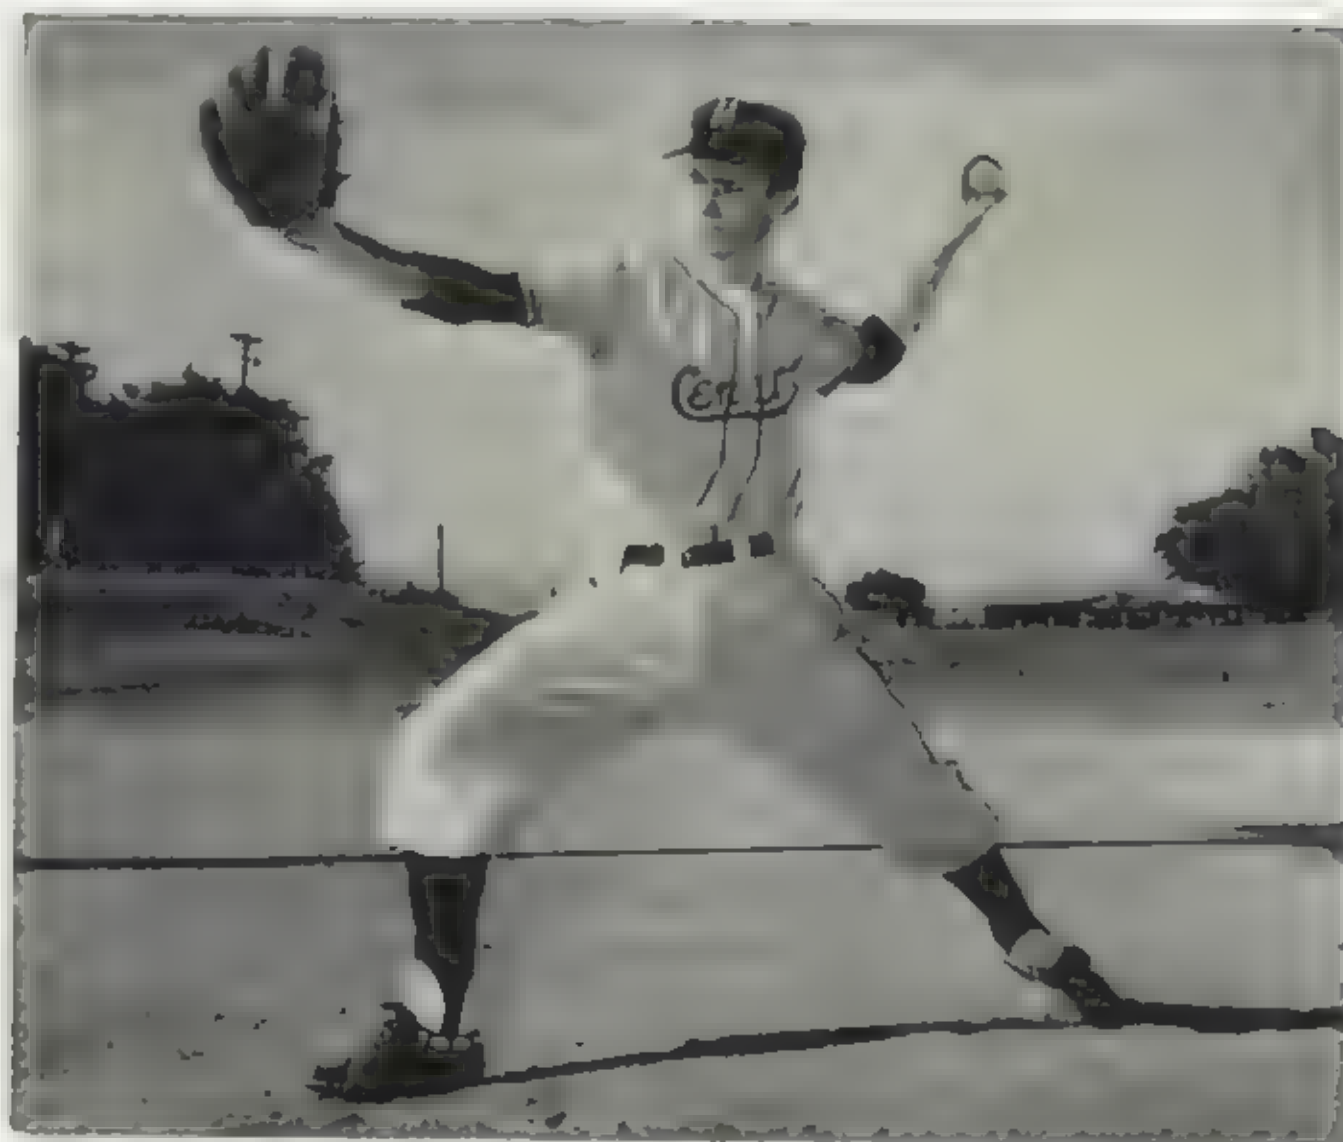

HIGH SCHOOL HENRY, "bench jockey" first class and veteran bulwark of Central's vocal bench strength, leads the Warriors through heated and crucial moments by unnerving the opposition with such soul-shattering expressions as "Go home, bum!" and "Your mother wears blue jeans" accompanied by loud blasts with his duck call.

A flip of a coin and a narrow one-run loss marred a nearly perfect season for the Warriors, who seemed suddenly jinxed in the final stretch of the Shaughnessy Playoffs. When the end of the season found the Warriors and South Side in a tie for the title, a coin was flipped to decide the Western Championship and an eventual berth in the city playoffs. Central's only defeats were an early-season upset at the hands of South Side and an ill-timed loss to Frayser late in the season.

Though few breaks came Central's way, the '62 season was brightened by promise of future standouts. Sophomore Jerry Roper, making his first appearance in the Prep League, impressively came on in relief to win his first game. Robert Finley showed promise in overpowering Frayser and South Side. A line-up loaded with other juniors means Coach Hardy will have few worries in 1963. Jim Cole, George Barnes, Gene Fulghum, Phil Murphree, Duane Anderson, Don Deaton, Mike Hines, and Robert Coker will undoubtedly see their second season as starters in '63.

JIMMY RILEY blasts one that's "too hot to handle" through the hole and into center field for one of his two home runs against CBC in the big Central victory over the Brothers.

SCAMPERING BACK to the base safely despite a CB pop-out attempt, Robert Coker demonstrates the agility on the basepaths which combined with his high on-base percentage earned him a permanent spot as the Warriors' starting second baseman.

1962, a year in which Central continually attempted to fight to the top of the Prep League, was filled with one disheartening setback after another. The second game of the season found the Warriors fighting an uphill battle as they lost to South Side by a lone run. The determined Warriors were not to be stymied, however, and came back with a win over Humes. Central pitching accounted for the next four wins as the team gathered momentum. A win over South Side meant the seventh straight victory for the Warriors and succession to the number-one spot in the West. Central's perch atop the Division was short-lived, however, as Frayser upset the Redmen. Though the Warriors slipped by their last three opponents, only a tie for the title could be salvaged. The possibility of taking home Western Division honors vanished when the Warriors lost the flip of a coin to South Side for the Division championship. Messick also made the end of the '62 season a bleak one, as they eliminated the Warriors from the Shaugnessy Playoffs for the city title.

Warrior Thinclads Breeze

No Prep League team survived a triangular meet with the 1962 Central track squad, a team loaded with depth and versatile athletes. It often happened that three or four Prep teams combined could win no more than five out of seventeen events against the Warriors. Buddy Ratcliffe, the super-star of the '62 Prep League, not only made the pole vault event an automatic first place for the Warriors but also set Memphis Relay, Regional, and District records in that event. In many meets he won the broad jump and low hurdled events as well. Another double winner was Doug Tindall—Central's top sprinter, who ran the 100 and 220. James Challen was a regular winner in both the 880 and the mile runs. The 440-yard dash was a contest between two Redmen, John Tucker and Bob Watkins. Always, they assured Central a first and a second place in this event. Central's brawn—Pete Van Epps, Steve Tichenor, and Neal Clement—heaved the discus and put the shot to pile more points upon the tremendous Warrior totals. In addition, Warrior depth made Central's relay team consistent winners; and many placed high in Regional and District competition. It is no wonder that with such a plethora of talent the '62 squad won the District title. Only a narrow loss in the Regional Meet marred one of the great track seasons in Warrior history.

COMPARING PRACTICE times with past performances, Coach Lloyd McDougal casts a critical eye in the direction of the track team running sprints at Crump Stadium. Coach Mac's popularity among the boys on the athletic program and his demand for maximum individual effort combine to turn out a track team which is always a contender for the Prep title.

Charles is slated to perform in the newly created 100 or 200 yard dash and 1962's first prospect to state points strained one muscle too many. CLASSY NET PLAY and power in the back of the hand were assets to the Warrior twosome, Robert Stewart and Pete Howell, who were not defeated in Prep League doubles play

CENTRAL'S TENNIS TEAM—(top to bottom) Pete Howell, Leonard Engelberg, Robert Stewart, and Stanley Engelberg (not pictured)—not only shelled all other teams to win the Prep League championship but also boasted three players and two doubles teams that never suffered a loss

RIDDLE: WHAT is worse than playing tennis against an Engelberg? Answer: Playing against two Engelbergs. Leonard and Stanley, two of the league's top netters, spelled the worst kind of double trouble for Central opposition as they led the Warriors to a Prep championship and went undefeated to win the doubles title

At Central focus is on the individual. Here each is given a unique opportunity to develop his own personality, to project himself, to share his own ideas. Being exposed to many viewpoints, he can weigh and adopt those which best suit his temperament. The wealth of diversity on the Central campus is invaluable. Teachers in all departments design their courses to stimulate the student's thinking. Activities are planned which will channel his energies in a constructive direction. Simple conversations and experiences can teach him about the magnitude or the shortcomings of people.

Through his days at Central, he is among fifteen hundred students who are intent on learning; he is pursuing the intangibles which are the foundation of all his hopes and expectations. He is a part of the process of mass education, but he retains the remarkable faculty to remain an individual.

With Leadership Assumed and Status Received

UGH! UGH! Dennis Goodwin, chief warrior of the Senior class, displays the tribal headdress of leadership to his Senior executive board, Gene Fulghum, Sgt at Arms; Dorothy Dow, Vice-Pres.; Julia Lazenby, Sec., and George Barnes, Treas. mimic the actions of their Warrior chief.

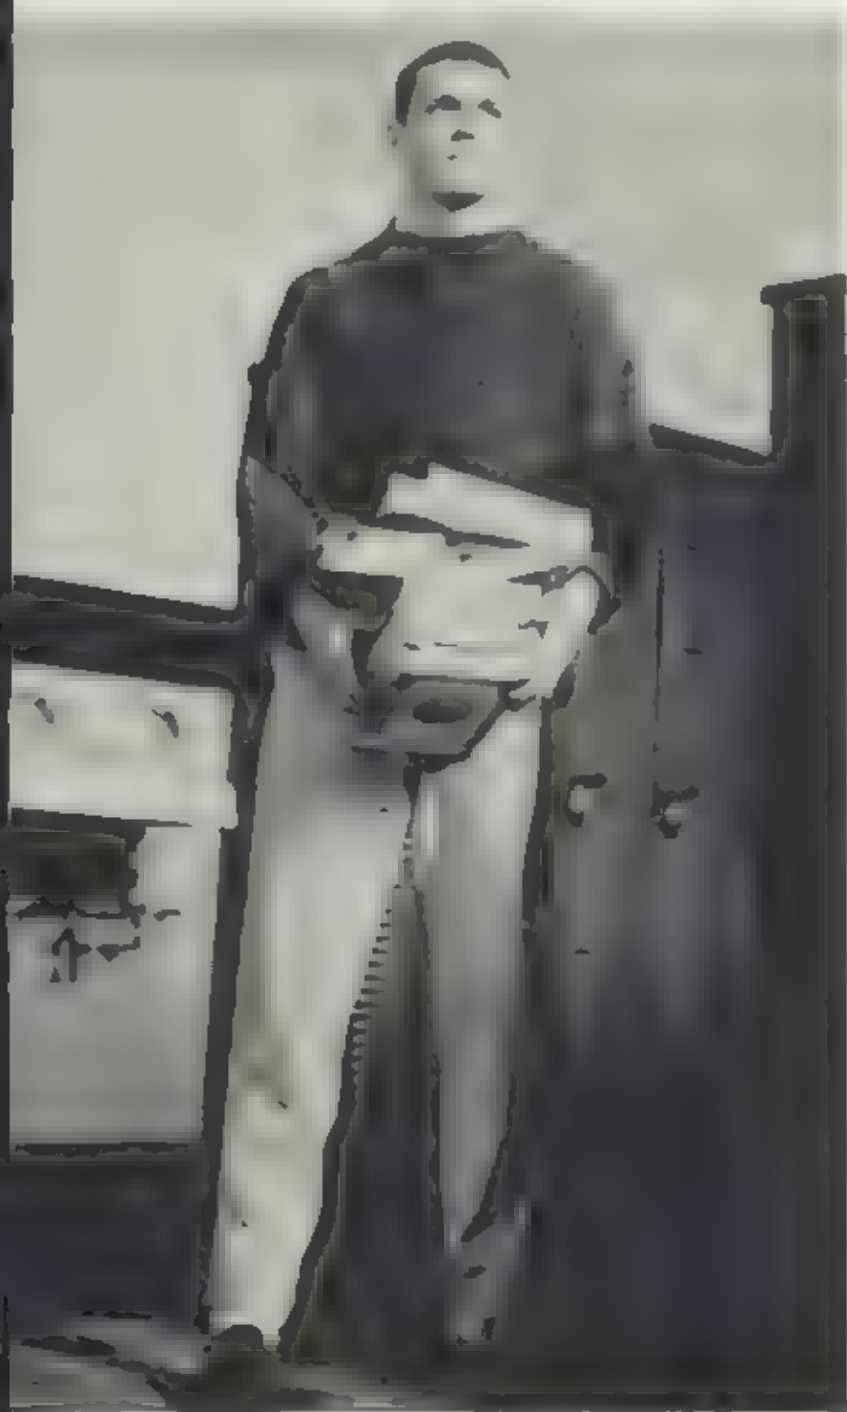

As we entered Central in the fall of 1960, many of us felt that we would never live up to the high standards of our predecessors. Soon, however, we found ourselves accepting responsibilities that challenged our minds. Central instilled in us a spirit to succeed, a charge to study, and a desire to be loyal.

For the last three years we have shared numerous experiences. As frightened freshmen, we braved our first exams; as relaxed juniors, we joined Central clubs and organizations; and as serious Seniors, we assumed the leadership of upperclassmen.

At graduation we will participate in a ceremony which signifies the end of our high school days. After graduation we will go our separate ways, but we will take with us the respect, the discipline, and the loyalty that Central has taught.

"PUSH, SHOVE, pull, scratch—let us at those rings!" This is the spirit of being juniors, these students fight for the precious gems that designate them as seniors.

Relaxed Juniors Become Serious Seniors.

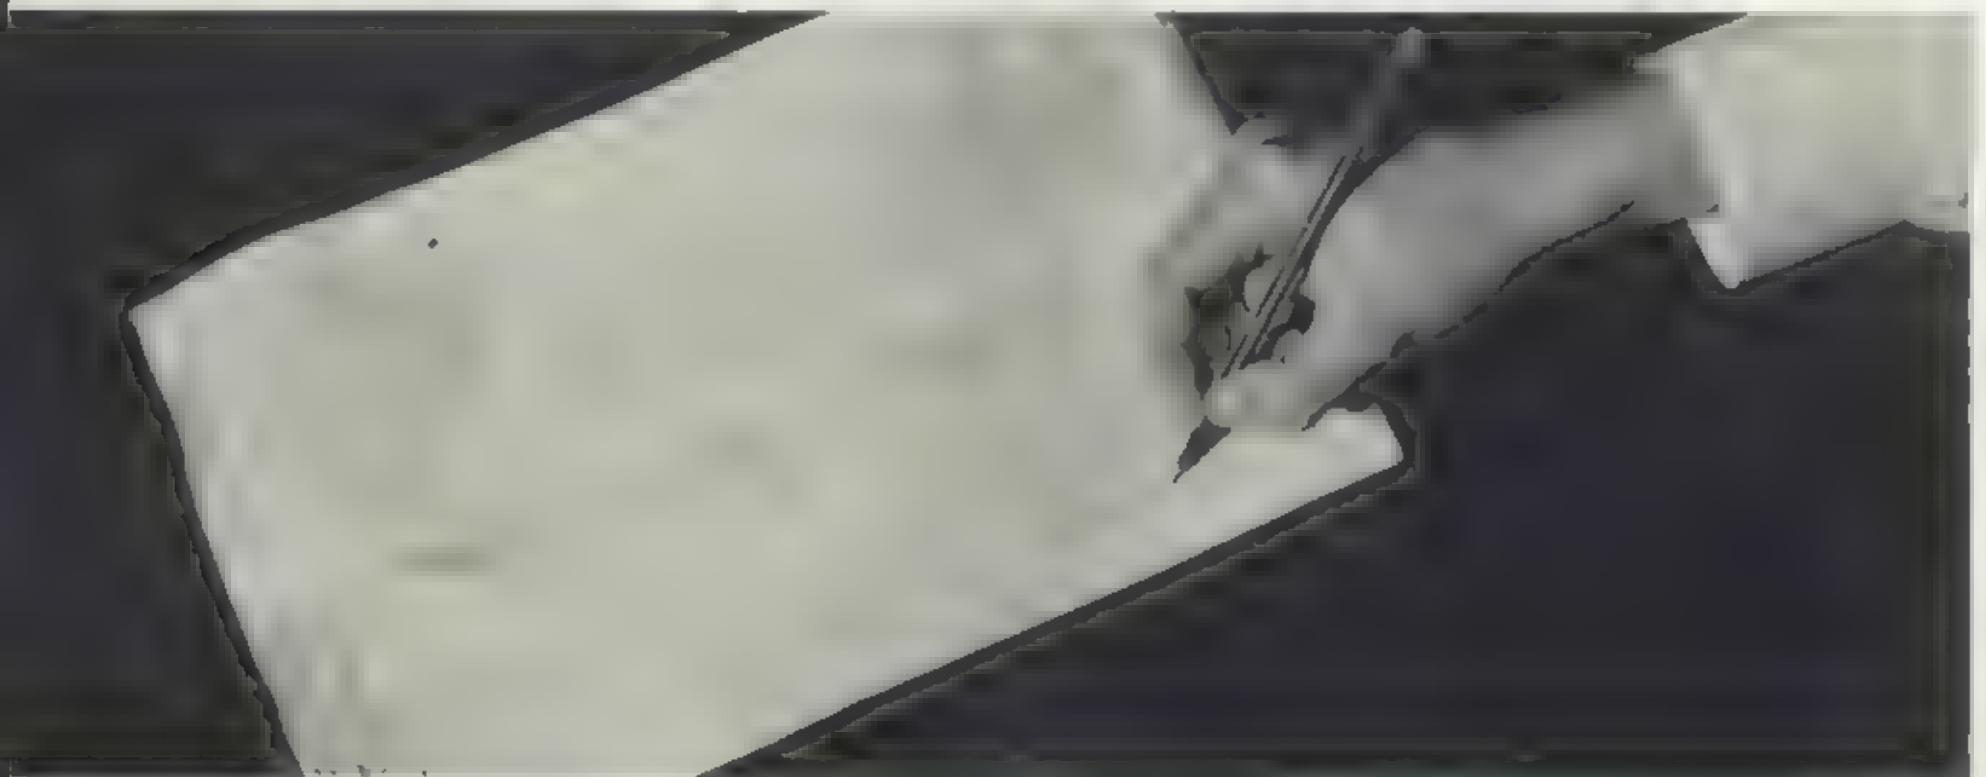

WITH THE FIRST day of school comes the inevitable assignment of books. Much to his dismay senior Jerry Moore up like many of his classmates finds this year's load heavier than ever.

NO! NO! NO! reiterate seniors Paula Stern and Harriet Sauerbrunn who took the lead in Central's protest against the enlargement of Crump Stadium. Student petitions presented to the city commission proved to be a major factor in the defeat of this measure.

HONOR SOCIETY MEMBER and Meet Scholarship Semifinalist Paul Silvio gains recognition for his three years of service to Central. By marking extra-curricular activities for the Yearbook, seniors receive proper acclaim for school participation.

 WARRIOR Kickoff

IT'S NOT every day that a senior is at a loss for words. However, Susan Steckol, frantically trying to organize her research paper, appears dumfound
 ed. A term assignment plus note cards references, and outlines equals a slightly French-fried senior with per forated nerves and novel new neuroses.

to Receive Their High School Diplomas.

"NOW I'VE GOT one!" smiles Leeba Andrews as she and Mrs. William Andrews compare diplomas. In 1943 Mrs. Andrews graduated from Central with the honor of Student Council President; nineteen years later her daughter attained this same honor.

SUFFERING FROM writer's cramps, Mr. King signs the last of the 428 diplomas of the 1963 graduating class. Although tiring, this task is one that he enjoys, for he knows that Central graduates are well prepared for college.

With the Preparation That Central Gives These

Graduates, They Can March Confidently Into the Future.

FULFILLING THE TRUST placed in her by her homeroom, delegate Emily Priest supports their choices for junior class officers at the nominating convention.

Having completed their first year at Central, the Juniors are prepared to accept the responsibilities which come to them. Potential leaders of Central, Juniors are the willing workers behind the scenes of school activities. They enthusiastically take advantage of the many opportunities to serve Central by working in the office, the bookstore, and the candy counter and by participating in school productions. Each February the Juniors who have excelled scholastically receive invitations to the National Honor Society, Quill and Scroll, and Math Club. In hopes of receiving a scholarship or financial aid to help them enter college, Juniors take the Merit Scholarship and College Entrance Examinations. The arrival of class rings climaxes the year and brings Juniors closer to that all-important goal of becoming next year's Seniors.

In Their Role as New Centralites, Freshmen

LOOKING TOWARD the future with bright eyes and sharp ideas are the new freshman class officers for 1962-1963. President Jerry M... ..

... Vice President Sarah Shaw, Secretary Carol Cadwell, Treasurer Patty Leas, Sergeant at Arms, Ann Marie Hudson.

DECORATIONS AND SKIT ideas for the freshman class party are the topics being discussed by these enthusiastic young officers. Since this is the highlight of the freshman year, everyone wants to make it an event that will be remembered.

We Freshmen were eager as we stepped into the new world of a senior high school. We were anxious to learn and to develop new ideas, and we enjoyed the feeling of closeness and friendship gained at Central.

As Freshmen we first associated Central with hard work, plenty of studying and preparation for college. We were impressed by the whirl of activity; but after making new friends, joining many different clubs, and becoming accustomed to school life, we learned to keep up with the maddening pace. As the year progressed, the responsibilities of serving our school and upholding its traditions helped us to increase our knowledge and develop a greater feeling of maturity.

Though dazed at first by the throng of activity, we soon felt as though we were helping to uphold the fine record that Central High has always had.

Are Proud to Assume Many Responsibilities.

"WERE WE ever that small?" thinks Austin Gaines as he and Lisa Thompson cast unbelieving glances at pint-size freshmen Charan Burchgiani and Ronnie Bailey. Every year freshmen suffer from chronic stiff necks caused by looking up at seniors. In three years, however, they too can ask, "Were we ever that small?"

ADVERTISEMENTS

Are these shady-looking characters students of Central High School? Yes, they are. Although their appearance would ordinarily be frowned upon by the students and faculty, their bedraggled clothes are heartily greeted with laughter and applause, for they are enacting a scene in the Warrior Kick-off skit, the annual affair which "kicks-off" the Warrior yearbook and newspaper subscription sales.

Our business staff capitalizes on the fact that humor is one of the most effective approaches to advertising. With a soft-sell technique these "actors" introduced the contents of the book; they displayed their product to the consumer. Then was instituted a sweeping campaign which resulted in the students buying over thirteen-hundred copies of the 1963 Warrior Yearbook.

For the merchant who advertises in the Warrior, such astounding sale offers the potential of a vast clientele, the hundreds of students and adults who read the book.

Forging Ahead With Memphis!

With over $5 million of insurance in force, we at American Frontier Life are proud to be a part of the Memphis story — giving Memphians the opportunity to invest life insurance dollars for the future with a home town company. We will continue to re-invest these dollars in the future greatness of Memphis and the Mid South.

THE BIG QUESTION

Many a woman on the way who are the best dressed at them all. These who patronize THE CALIFORNIA SHOP like many other discerning women in the Memphis area. Kelly McConnel has taken the mirror's advice and purchased her clothes and accessories from this fine new store located at 1675 Madison.

L. P. LIBRARY

The world's greatest entertainment is at Jackie Collins' fingertips when she visits MARTY'S RECORD SHOP, 50 South Main. Taking her choice from the outstanding selections of oldies and popular best sellers is a difficult decision. Whichever her preference, she is assured of fine listening pleasure.

AN ADDRESS OF DISTINCTION

A chef's delight—this delectably tempting array of foods offered at BRITLINGS LAURELWOOD. This new, modern cafeteria features delicious food at modest prices and fast efficient service. Jimmy Mitchell, Gene Johnson, Mary Hays and Nan Jones know they are about to enjoy the convenience of eating a dinner in the South's finest—BRITLINGS LAURELWOOD.

SUNDRY SERVICE

MUELLER PHARMACY'S fine reputation is Dane Dunn's guarantee of receiving reliable pharmaceuticals and sundries. MUELLER'S, conveniently located across the street from the Plaza Shopping Center, is equipped to provide the community with all its medical needs.

A DIPPY FOR YOUR THOUGHTS

Fifty B. and C. Agave willily cast pennies into COLETTA'S wishing well, hoping they can soon return to enjoy more of the fine Italian food prepared from original recipes. COLETTA'S, 4940 Summer, has long been the favorite place for those who prefer tranquil dining in an atmosphere of Old Italy.

FAMOUS FOR FINE FOOD

THE COFFEE CUP, 204 East Broadway, the place where friendly crowds gather, is known in the West Memphis area for outstanding service and fine food. In THE COFFEE CUP'S dining room Nancy Fogarty is certain of receiving excellent food flavored with real Southern hospitality.

A VALENTINE DREAM

Surrounded by fine SCHRAFFT'S chocolates, Patty Pascha thinks ahead to Valentine's Day. A special treat on holidays, these fine candies are suitable gifts for any occasion. This year delight your Valentine with temptingly delicious candies from SCHRAFFT'S.

THE MORNING AFTER

What a morning! Just a party in the room at Cambridge? Friends have been over if you are in this dilemma as Helen Moore is. Just call MEMPHIS HOUSE CLEANING CO. and have your home in a jiffy and again.

VICTORY'S REWARD

Proudly, team of five victors John Griffin is admiring one of the many trophies which can be obtained at LAWSON CAVETTE SPORTING GOODS CO. for those special occasions. Football players like John can always be found buying their sporting equipment from LAWSON-CAVETTE, 9 North Third Street.

FOOD YOU ENJOY

TODDLE HOUSE is the twenty-four hour hot and cozy night American cafe and in Memphis, alone there are eleven convenient, located TODDLE HOUSES ready to serve you. Frank Tap and Sally Walter are anticipating the tasty food and quick courteous service which has made the TODDLE HOUSES the favorite place to eat the country over.

FASCINATION

GUIDE TO SUCCESS

William Faris, Commissioner of Public Works, and George Robert E. King and officers of the P.T.A. are striving to create for the youth of Memphis a better and more successful future. This organization endeavors to attain this goal by their loyal support of many school activities. The P.T.A. has, through its efforts, established itself as an integral part of Central, the community and the city.

Adaptability, Originality, and Dedication.

HAVING ALMOST PERSUADED the proprietor of Tri-State Florist to advertise in the Warrior Yearbook Business Staff members Helen Moore and Richard Monserrat eagerly await the big moment when they hear that hesitant sound of a pen scratching a signature on an ad contract.

From time to time an alumnus returns to Central; he finds that his second view of Central is strangely altered from that of his high school days. Only after long years have passed and everyday school events have become memories does he really see the campus, for as a student he never noticed the uniqueness of its character. Only when he returns, he finally realizes the precious thing he has lost—so unappreciated then—so unattainable now.

The numerous experiences of daily life are absorbed into the student's very being and command little conscious attention—the quiet, desperate hours before finals, the contagious gaiety of Friday afternoons, the sleepy, anxious days before Student Council elections, the off key singing of the fight song, the pushing and shoving to find two seats together in the auditorium, the surging thrill of winning a championship game. These scenes lose the singular flavor they give to a student's high school days. Only in retrospect can he recognize the blending of the diverse elements which create a never-to-be-forgotten experience—Central in Harmony.

TAKING A REMINISCENT look at Central alumnus John Whitsett, honor graduate in the Class of '39, recalls the days when his classmates designated him as "handsome." Since graduation Mr. Whitsett has distinguished himself by attaining the honored position of Vice-President of the First National Bank of Memphis.
